$1000-A-DAY FINES

CUPW Ordered Back In Bill

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Striking postal workers were ordered to stay on the job until Dec. 31, 1979, under a stern back-to-work bill introduced in the Commons today.

The bill orders an end to the national strike called Monday night by leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW). It provides stiff fines for violation of the law.

There was no immediate indication the legislation will be obeyed by Victoria's inside postal employees.

Peter de Belle, secretary of the Victoria Local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said members will have to consider a number of factors before deciding whether or not to obey a government back-to-work order.

He said the union will have to study the contents of the strike-ending legislation, then the CUPW executive will have to make some recommendations following which, meetings will be held at the local level to see what the members wish to do.

Jean-Claude Parrot, the union's national president, has said he would ask workers to disregard such legislation.

Meanwhile, the U.S. has halted mail service to Canada.

Under the bill, an individual member who defied the order to return to work and stay on the job would be fined $100 a day for each day off the job. That is substantially harsher than the straight fine of $100 generally imposed for infraction of the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

Union officials would be liable to a fine of $2,500 plus $250 for each day they disobeyed the law, up from the general provision of a $300 fine. The union itself would be liable to a fine of $10,000 plus $1,000 a day if it counselled disobedience of the law.

The bill was introduced by Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet.

It appoints a mediator-arbitrator to make binding contract recommendations if a negotiated agreement cannot be reached.

The bill provides for extension of the collective agreement between CUPW and the government that expired more than a year ago. All attempts to reach settlement since the June 30, 1977, expiration have failed.

Leaders of the 23,000-member union called the inside postal workers off their jobs across the country Monday night, hours after the failure of a final negotiating attempt.

About 2,800 inside postal workers in 34 locals throughout British Columbia were out today.

The 1,850-member Vancouver local walked out at 9:30 p.m. PDT Monday in a well-orchestrated evacuation of the building which took about 10 minutes.

Lloyd Ingram, president of the Vancouver local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), said members were called out before midnight to prevent midnight shift worters from showing up to work needlessly.

"We've been ready for a month," Ingram said. "After 18 months of fruitless bargaining, we'd be stupid not to be."

Mail delivery in Toronto was halted as about 5,000 inside postal workers joined the strike.

$50M Boost For B.C. Tourism

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia and federal governments today signed a $50 million, five-year agreement to boost tourism in B.C. and to halt Canada's increasing deficit in the international travel market.

Called the Canada-British Columbia Travel Industry Development Subsidiary Agreement, it will pump funds into five major programs, including $9 million tabbed for development of year-round recreational facilities at Whistler Mountain, a ski resort area about 80 kilometres northeast of here.

The agreement was announced jointly at a news conference by Marcel Lessard, federal minister of the Department of Economic Regional Economic Expansion, provincial Economic Development Minister Don Phillips and Grace MacCarthy, provincial minister of tourism.

The agreement, which excludes Vancouver and Victoria areas, calls for low interest or forgivable loans for new and expanded facilities such as resorts, motels and other facilities; creation of "travel generators" such as park development, historic site restoration and cultural centres to attract tourists; training programs for management and staff at tourist spots; and year-round muli-recreational facilities at areas designated world-class ski resorts.

AUXI GETS LIFE

A man who entered a surprise guilty plea to a second degree murder charge today was sentenced in B.C. Supreme Court to life in prison.

John George Auxi, 40, standing before Mr. Justice H.E. Hutcheon, said: "I wish to plead guilty to the lesser inclusive offence of second degree murder."

Auxi was being tried on two counts of first degree murder in the Dec. 11, 1977, shooting slayings of Gizelle Schild, 41, and Sandor Kormos, 43, in Kormos' rented room at 1242 Fort.

The evidence included a statement obtained by an undercover operative who was booked into police cells where Auxi was being held after his arrest March 4.

SALMON BOOST

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A $150 million program to double the present salmonid population and return it to levels of several years ago was announced by fisheries officials Monday.

The salmonid enhancement program (SEP) will be divided into phases, the first lasting seven years. The money is being allocated by Fisheries and Oceans Canada (Pacific Region).

'I'm Not Going to Be Crushed By a Few Byelections,' says PM

Times News Services

Canadian voters issued a stinging rebuke to Prime Minister Trudeau's 10-year-old Liberal government Monday, electing 10 Conservatives in a record 15 federal byelections contested in seven provinces.

However, a smiling Trudeau told the Commons Monday night: "I'm not going to be crushed by losing a few byelections."

He now has at least six months before a spring general election to change voter minds about his government, he said.

"I can take all the time I want to show the people that I can run the country," Trudeau said.

Meanwhile, basking in the afterglow of the victories, Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark told the Commons today he detected "echoes of agony" from the Liberal benches.

Aside from a few catcalls directed at the widely-grinning Clark, the Liberals appeared subdued and contemplative after winning only two of the 15 byelections Monday.

As well as the 10 Conservative victories, the New Democratic Party won two seats and Social Credit took one.

Only Employment Minister Bud Cullen verbally acknowledged the byelections when he replied to questions by NDP Leader Ed Broadbent.

Cullen congratulated Broadbent for making a breakthrough in Newfoundland following the election of the NDP candidate in Humber-St. Georges-St. Barbe.

The Liberals now hold 135 seats in the House. The Conservatives have 97, the New Democratic Party 17, the Social Credit 9 and there are six Independents.

The Liberals' only wins came in their traditional power base in Quebec, where they retained the Westmount seat and took the Ste. Hyacinthe seat from the Conservatives.

Tories were re-elected in Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, Fundy-Royal, Halifax-East Hants and Hamilton-Wentworth and took the former Liberal districts of Rosedale, Parkdale, York-Scarborough, Ottawa Centre and Eglinton and St. Boniface in Manitoba.

The second NDP victory was a squeaker on Toronto-Broadview, a seat it has held for years.

Perhaps as important as the outcome, was the popular vote. The Conservatives averaged almost 49 per cent in the 15 ridings, up nine percentage points from the last general election in 1974, the Liberals dropped to 30.5 per cent from 41.3 and the NDP rose to 16.4 per cent from 13.5 in 1974.

Clark, while admitting disappointment with his party's showing in Quebec, said the vote clearly showed the Conservative party's "superior ability to form a government."

Broadbent said the win by Fonse Faour, a 27-year-old lawyer, in Newfoundland was a breakthrough for the party.

In Rosedale, David Crombie, the five-foot-five former "tiny perfect mayor" of Toronto, knocked off John Evans, who turned to politics after leaving the presidency of University of Toronto and was a hand-picked Liberal candidate.

The riding had been the preserve of Donald Macdonald who gave up to return to private law practice.

In Parkdale, where Trudeau appeared twice to support Liberal Art Eggleton, a high-profile Toronto alderman for years, Tory Yuri Shymko won a seat that had been Liberal since 1962.

The Conservatives pulled a major upset in York-Scarborough, a riding considered the bellwether for voters. It has always supported the

KORCHNOI ALL BUT BEATEN

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (Reuter) — Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union appeared tonight to have successfully retained his world chess title.

The 32nd game of the world chess championship was adjourned with challenger Viktor Korchnoi, a Soviet defector, in a position that experts said is hopeless.

The challenger, playing black, sealed his 41st move for opening Wednesday after he plunged himself into serious time trouble and had to make six moves in two minutes.

Korchnoi was a pawn down and it appeared the champion had a knight sacrifice on his next turn that would make the game not worth continuing.

Korchnoi's grandmaster seconds believed that the 47-year-old challenger had lost his three-month battle to wrest the crown from his 27-year-old opponent.

Karpov's chief strategist, former world champion Mikhail Tal, said: "You don't have to be a grandmaster to understand the position."

Dow Taking A Clobbering

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The stock market, beset by interest-rate worries and concern over the U.S. dollar's problems, took a pounding today for the second straight session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 21.92 points Monday for its largest decline in nearly four years, dropped another 12.30 to 862.87 by 2 p.m.

Monday's decline in the Dow was its steepest since it fell 22.69 Nov. 18, 1974 in the final throes of the 1973-74 bear market.

Also contributing to the gloomy atmosphere was another decline by the dollar in foreign exchange.

City Biker Loses In Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP) — Bicycle riders who are seen breaking minor traffic laws and then refuse to give their names to police are guilty of the more serious charge of obstructing police, says a 5-to-2 majority decision today of the Supreme Court of Canada.

The issue of whether the biker can claim the right to remain silent under such circumstances arose in the appeal of Richard Harvey Moore, a 49-year-old Victoria resident who cycled through a red light in April, 1976.

When Moore refused to give his name to a police officer, he was charged with obstructing the law. A jury acquitted him of the charge when instructed by the trial judge that sections of the B.C. motor vehicle laws imposed no duty on him to identify himself to police.

However, the British Columbia Court of Appeal overturned that decision and ordered a new trial on the obstruction charge.

Both the majority and minority decisions of the Supreme Court said that Moore had the right to remain silent. They also agreed that a section of the Criminal Code allowed the police officer to arrest Moore for going through the red light to learn his identity.

But they parted company on whether Moore was guilty of obstructing the police officer and thus subject to a two-year jail sentence.

Said Mr. Justice Wishart Spence on behalf of the majority:

"I have not forgotten the provisions of the Bill of Rights nor the topic of individual freedom generally. But I am of the opinion that there is not even minimal interference with any freedom of a citizen, who is seen committing an infraction by a police officer, in the police constable simply requesting his name and address without any attempt to obtain from that person any admission of fault or any comment whatsoever.

"On the other hand the refusal of a citizen to identify himself under such circumstances causes a major inconvenience and obstruction to the police in carrying out their proper duties."

Spence added that if anyone wanted to balance the two interests involved he had no doubt that his decision would be supported "by the overwhelming public interest."

Agreeing with him were Mr. Justices Ronald Martland, Roland Ritchie, Louis-Philippe Pigeon and Jean Beetz.

Mr. Justice Brian Dickson, speaking for himself and Mr. Justice Willard Estey, said one issue had to do with the police power of interrogation and the right of citizens to remain silent.

Mortgage Rate Rises to 11¼%

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mortgage interest rates today rose to 11.25 per cent and were closing in on the all-time Victoria high of 12.25 per cent.

Real Estate spokesmen said this increase is a severe blow to the economy and to the real estate market.

"It is unfortunate the rates had to go up at this time," said Victoria Real Estate board president Bev Highton.

"This isn't going to help the real estate market at all."

Banks and trust companies had been resisting upward pressures on the interest rate through previous hikes by the Bank of Canada but the latest one — a jump of three-quarters of one per cent — was too much to ignore.

"This all has been done to protect the dollar and I guess it was necessary but the effects will be severe," Highton said.

"Higher interest rates are bad for the real estate industry and bad for the national economy as well."

Alan Aldous, Victoria manager of Royal Trust, said further mortgage interest hikes would almost inevitably follow if the Bank of Canada raises its rates again.

"It is difficult to predict trends in interest rates but the pressure is upwards at this time."

The all-time high in Victoria was in October, 1974, when the rate soared to 12.25 per cent at trust companies. This rate held for only 40 days and then rates began to drop down to lower levels.

During the past two years, rates have been as low as 9.75 in Victoria and were 10.25 per cent at this time last year.

Rates held firm through several increases in the federal bank rate, brought in to protect the dollar, but gave in to pressures over the summer, moving from 10.25 to 10.75 per cent.

Today the rates rose to 11 per cent or higher across the city.

Generally, five year mortgage interest is 11.25 per cent while 11-per-cent money is available for exceptionally attractive properties or for short-term mortgages.

Aldous said any increase in the federal discount rate in the United States would be the signal for another round of increases in Canada.

The Bank of Canada would have to raise Canadian rates in order to attract U.S. investment and this, in turn, would force up all interest rates, including mortgages.

"I hope we don't go over 12 per cent but it is certainly possible."

There was some good news for investors in the rate increases.

Guaranteed investment certificates were atractive with interest of 10.25 per cent being paid to customers for five-year deposits.

The Canada Savings Bond sale had been weak even before the latest round of interest increases and Ottawa was expected to move today to try to make it more attractive by raising the interest rate well above nine per cent.

Anyone who purchased a bond at a lower rate would be entitled to the new rate immediately.

the current postal strike because the boxes are not being cleared.

Buzz Sawyer also said the box lobby at 1230 Government will be open today and Wednesday from 7:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. but if the strike continues, the area containing the boxes will be locked until further notice.

Unemployment insurance cheques will be distributed at Bay Street Armoury Thursday and Friday this week, due to the postal strike.

Cheque distribution will begin at 11 a.m. Thursday and continue to 3 p.m. The cheques will be distributed during the same hours Friday.

The Canada Employment Centre will transfer 15 employees to the armoury to handle the process.

If the strike is halted, cheques will go in the mail Friday afternoon so they can be received in Victoria Monday.

In a trial run during rotating strikes of letter carriers, the armoury was used as a distribution point and the waiting period was not long, a CEC spokesman said.

"There is a bit of a wait until distribution begins at 11 a.m. but after that the line moves through quite quickly."

Meanwhile, most Victoria businesses appeared to be riding out the first day of the strike before taking any alternative measures to pickup or deliver their mail.

Spokesmen for business organizations said the companies are generally waiting to see whether federal back-to-work legislation will force a quick end to the strike.

Bawlf Hires Manitoban

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf Monday appointed Allan Murray as assistant deputy minister in charge of the department of conservation.

Murray, 48, a career civil servant in Manitoba, will be responsible for restructuring the department including fisheries and wildlife management, habitat protection and the enforcement of laws and regulations.

Conciliator Expected In Teacher-Pact Talks

Contract negotiations between the Greater Victoria Teachers Association (GVTA) and the school district have reached the conciliation stage.

GVTA president Trevor Calkins said today the education ministry will appoint a conciliator this week.

Negotiations have been going on for about a month but not much is happening, Calkins said.

He said the GVTA executive and the school board negotiating committee have settled a few minor points but have not discussed salary increases.

A salary increase percentage figure was omitted from a contract proposal package ratified by GVTA membership last month.

Both the GVTA and the school district have avoided polarization by not taking a stand on salary increases.

The B.C. Teachers Federation earlier recommended a 10 to 12 per cent salary increase while the B.C. School Trustees Association asked districts to offer a four per cent raise.

Traditionally, conciliation has not been productive and negotiations have usually gone to arbitration, Calkins said.

If an agreement is not reached by Nov. 15, the matter will go to arbitration.

Deadline Extended On Wharf Street Site

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf has extended to Dec. 15 the deadline for proposals for the development of the Reid site on Wharf Street.

This is the second extension since the call for proposals was nationally advertised.

Bawlf said he has made substantial changes in the design criteria for the site which will be made known next week.

The changes were triggered by what Bawlf called constructive comments from firms which had submitted ideas to the government for the development of the property below Bastion Square.

The $5 million scheme was to contain a number of retail food outlets, but that part of the proposal has received some criticism.

Renewal of War Vowed By Syria

BEIRUT (AP) — Syria's foreign minister has promised a renewal of his army's war against the Lebanese Christians, and Saudi Arabia's foreign minister has told the United States and France the Lebanese crisis is none of their business.

Abdul Halim Khaddam of Syria told a news conference Monday his government is determined to end collaboration between the Christian militiamen and Israel, and that this has the unanimous backing of President Elias Sarkis of Lebanon and five other Arab governments who contribute token forces or money to reinforce the Syrian army in Lebanon.

Khaddam and Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Butros have been meeting since Sunday with representatives of the other five governments at Beiteddin, 24 kilometres southeast of Beirut. Khaddam also met with Lebanese Moslem leader Walid Jumblatt, who said that if Syria withdraws its 26,000-plus troops in Lebanon, "We wilt fight another civil war against the Israeli-armed and backed Christians."

The Saudi foreign minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, said the Arabs will not accept the Christians' demand that UN troops replace the Syrians, "nor will they accept solutions by the Western powers such as the United States and France."

"Internationalization will only complicate Lebanon's problems," he declared. "The only hope for a solution is through Arab nations."

France, which ran Lebanon between the world wars under League of Nations mandate, and the United States are both seeking ways to end the Syrian-Christian crisis.

Euphoria Over Pipeline Quickly Plugged

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The euphoria surrounding the passage on the weekend of legislation to enable the construction of the 4,700-mile Alaska natural gas pipeline was brief-lived.

On Monday, barely 24 hours after the U.S. Congress passed President Jimmy Carter's natural gas pricing bill, the U.S. builder of the proposed Alaska line warned that it still may not be able to raise the private capital necessary to finance the multi-billion dollar project.

The builder, Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., of Salt Lake City, Utah, said in a brief to the U.S. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission that unless drastic changes are made to financing proposals the company will have to "curtail its activities on the Alaskan segment of the Alaska natural gas transportation system and seek federal financial assistance and support."

In granting approval last year for the construction of the proposed pipeline, both President Carter and the U.S. Congress were adamant that the entire project would have to be privately financed, that there would be no financial guarantees forthcoming from U.S. governments.

Northwest Alaskan says emphatically however, in its brief to FERC that the proposed financial rewards are inadequate and unless there are changes, there will be no pipeline.

The company brief, which is extraordinarily strident in tone, was drafted in response to a proposed rule-making handed down by the energy commission on Sept. 15. In that ruling, the FERC proposed a formula which would establish a variable rate of return for equity investor in the project.

The rate of return would be tied to the cost performance on the project.

If, for example, Northwest Alaskan could bring the project in at its original $10 billion estimate, equity investors could receive up to 22.6 per cent. On the other hand, large cost overruns wold result in penalties, which would lower the rate of return to as little as 13 or 14 per cent. The company says this proposal is unacceptable, and asks the regulatory agency to, instead, establish both upper and lower limits, which are "just as reasonable."

The company also argues that it would be unacceptable to use the original cost estimate provided to the U.S. Congress in the spring of 1977 for purposes of calculating the cost performance of the project. In its proposed rulemaking, the FERC indicated that it would hold the builders to their original estimate of $10 billion in establishing the incentive formula, demanded by the president and the Congress.

The company also claims in its brief that there is inadequate protection in the proposed financial formula to compensate the builder for delays caused by governmental footdragging or other delays beyond the company's control.

Had senators and congressmen, who were reluctant supporters of the legislation in the first place been aware of the further demands that would be made by Northwest Alaskan it could well have affected the outcome of the vote.

Although the FERC proposals, to which Northwest Alaskan has taken such strenuous objection, are not final, the commission made clear when it handed down the proposals last month that it did not expect to make major changes. According to procedure set bylaw, there must be public hearings before the proposals become final. A firm date has not yet been set, but it is expected the hearings will take place within a month.

New Talks Slated In U.S. For Smith

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration Monday invited Prime Minister Ian Smith and his three black co-leaders in Rhodesia's transitional government to new talks here Friday on the possibility of a peace conference with their guerrilla opponents.

In announcing the invitation, the State Department said it was prompted by Smith's statements last week that he and his three colleagues are willing to attend a conference of all the parties in the Rhodesian dispute "with no preconditions."

A conference bringing together both the leaders of the Smith government and the Patriotic Front guerrillas [illegible] bases outside Rhodesia is an essential element of the joint U.S.-British plan for ending the racial strife in the breakaway British colony and moving it to majority black rule.

So far Smith and the front's leaders, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, have been refusing to deal with each other. In the meantime, Smith has been moving ahead with his so-called "internal settlement" plan that is supposed to produce elections for majority rule in Rhodesia by the end of this year.

Smith, who is touring the United States in an effort to whip up U.S. support for his plan, balked at the idea of an all-parties conference as recently as last Monday, when he [illegible] with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

His stance heightened the tension between his government and the Carter administration and prompted President Carter to publicly reject Smith's bid for a meeting at the White House.

As the week went on, though, Smith shifted position. On Thursday he told members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he is prepared to attend a conference "without preconditions." Then, in a Saturday speech in San Diego, he said this position was shared by his three colleagues: Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau.

As a result, the State Department said Monday, Smith has accepted "in principle" an invitation to meet with "senior department officials and British representatives" for further discussion of how far his government is willing to go toward negotiating with the guerrilla leaders.

SEAL SLAUGHTER HALTED BY U.K.

The Guardian

EDINBURGH — The British government has bowed to pressure from an international army of protesters by conceding that the Scottish Department of Agriculture cannot now go ahead with the slaughter of almost 5,000 seals.

Late Monday night the Norwegian ship, Kvitungen, whose crew would have taken almost half of the seals, was heading back for its home port of Bergen, ordered from Orkney by the Secretary for Scotland, Bruce Millan.

His decision, which took protesters and department officials by surprise, came after another day of drama in the Orkney capital of Kirkwall. At one stage frogmen were summoned to undertake an underwater survey of the Kvitungen after police were warned that a bomb had been atatched to the side of the vessel. Nothing was found.

Some seal killing will still take place in Orkney and the Outer Hebrides Islands over the next few weeks.

Millan's decision was hailed as a major victory by local protesters and by Greenpeace, the international conservation group.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — A woman who died Sept. 17, leaving an estate that may be worth $250,000, willed $20,000 to her pet poodle, which died four years ago, and only $2,000 to her sister.

Dorothy Connelly named 16 animal welfare agencies as beneficiaries upon the death of her dog, Bay-Lee Brucy, whom she described as "a beloved friend of many years."

The 1971 will has been admitted to probate court. Mrs. Connelly had not changed it, despite the poodle's death.

Terms of the will indicate the sister, Elvira Casciello of Plainville, would get $2,000.

In the document, Mrs. Connelly wrote that she had "a great love of dogs and affection for animals and birds. They have been of chief solace through the years."

The $20,000 bequest to the poodle was to provide it with a comfortable life, a daily epilepsy capsule and all necessary veterinary care.

When the dog died, it was to be buried with a monument inscribed, A Just Tribute To The Memory of Bay-Lee Brucy Connelly, A Dog Born Jan. 7, 1959. Adieu Beloved Friend Of Many Years, Brave, Honest, Faithful And Grateful.

Bioenergetics Wins Nobel

Times News Services

STOCKHOLM — The 1978 Nobel prize for Chemistry today was awarded to Dr. Peter Mitchell of Cornwall, England, for "his contribution to the understanding of biological energy transfer."

Earlier today, Americans Arno Penzias and Robert Wilson of Bell Telephone Laboratories won half the Physics prize with Soviet physicist Piotr Leontevitch Kapitsa winning the other half.

The Swedish Academy of Sciences, in announcing the Chemistry award, said Mitchell, of the Glynn Research Laboratories in Cornwall, was cited for "his contribution to the understanding of biological energy transfer through the formulation of the chemiosmotic theory."

The U.S. physics winners were bonored for their discovery of cosmic microwave radiation and Kapitsa was lauded for research in low temperature phsyics.

Penzias was born in 1933 in Munich, West Germany, and received his doctorate at Columbia University in New York in 1962.

Dropping Like Autumn Leaves

There are a number of truisms about byelections — that people always seize the opportunity to vote against the government, that they are not true indicators of national opinion.

They are all useful to remember before plunging headlong into political speculation. But if the 15 cross-Canada byelections indicate anything at all, it is that the Liberal party is in dire trouble.

If the byelections were an isolated event, one could still make an optimistic assessment of affairs. But added to everything else that has fallen on the Liberal party in the last year, and the byelection results add up to very strong evidence that the country (Quebec excepted) wants a change.

The Toronto results must have Liberal party organizers feeling very glum indeed today. If they couldn't hold such former strongholds as Rosedale and Eglinton, represented by ex-cabinet ministers Donald Macdonald and Mitchell Sharp, with star candidates like University of Toronto president John Evans and former Chatelaine editor Doris Anderson, the Liberal party has reached a very low point.

In some ridings, the Grits ran third after the Conservatives and the New Democratic Party. Bryce Mackasey was dumped in Ottawa, running third. The Liberal candidate in Burnaby-Richmond-Delta dropped to a pitiful nine per cent of the vote (they had 27 per cent in the last general election).

The results also conform to a dangerous trend that has been developing for some time — the isolation of the Liberal party in fortress Quebec. This is a sad omen. For the Liberal party and the Conservatives, certainly. But it is the country which should take heed. The relatively successful governing of Canada for the last century has depended upon a partnership of English- and French-Canadian politicians, in both major political parties.

"... for us? ... how can we ever thank you? ..."

A Bridge Between Peoples

The unexpected choice of a warm and folksy Italian with few ties to the Roman Catholic church's bureaucratic machinery to be pope surprised people last month, as his sudden death after a mere five weeks shocked the world.

Now the elevation to the papacy of another outsider, Karol Cardinal Wojtyla of Poland, has redoubled the amazement of Catholics and non-Catholics alike. The end of a 455-year-old tradition of Italian pontiffs is not quite what anyone had expected.

A group of aging church leaders might be considered conservative and tradition-bound, and their choice of a new pope would reflect that. But the election of the two popes John Paul in quick succession has cleared away many ideas and conceptions once believed irrevocable.

Cardinal Wojtyla is certainly a clean break with the past. He is the first non-Italian pope since the early 16th century, the first Pole ever to be pope, the first leader of the church from a communist-ruled country.

This last "first" is probably the most significant fact about the Catholics' new pope. Pope Paul VI had begun a process of dialogue with the communist states of eastern Europe, and with the communists of his native Italy, the second most powerful political grouping in the country. Pope John Paul II will certainly be expected to continue the church's various approaches to the Soviet bloc. In this respect it is important to recognize that in Polish history, the communists are very recent interlopers. As long as there has been a Polish people, the church there has been a bulwark of Polish nationalism, a rallying point and a refuge.

The Polish church leadership since the Second World War has not co-operated arm in arm with the communists, but neither has it needlessly antagonized the government. It has kept up a slow but steady pressure for reforms and basic freedoms for Poles. The concept of separation of church and state is a foreign idea entirely to Poland; if there is not quite a partnership between equals, still the Polish government sometimes counts heavily on the church for help.

His own nationality also makes the new pope an important bridge between east and west, between the industrialized nations and the third world. Here may lie the new pope's most important task.

A Cliche Laid to Rest

The tragic death of five-year-old Jamie Baxter at Houston should not distract us from the magnificent effort and achievement of the people of that nothern B.C. community. That the young boy came so close to surviving a most terrible ordeal in a merciless country makes his death an especially bitter loss, tempered only barely by the miraculous survival of his young companion, David Crocker. Both boys became heroes of a sort, but no more so than the people of Houston.

It has become almost a cliche to lament the cold and callous nature of our times, but there is no doubt that the massive search effort that brought Houston to a virtual halt for several days last week was a rare and selfless expression of concern for others in trouble. Up to 400 searchers backed by volunteers combed the rugged bush country each day. The two biggest employers in the community shut down to allow their workers to help. Others came from surrounding towns to lend a hand.

These people gave Jamie Baxter every chance in the world to survive. He gave them in return the chance to show what kind of people we have still in this country.

Danes Seek NATO Aid

COPENHAGEN — A complicated, potentially lethal game of cat-and-mouse is taking place in the area of the Baltic Sea. To the people of Denmark, it is a game full of peril.

The cat is the Soviet Union. For now, it seems content to play with the Danes — in a sullen kind of way. But nobody knows for sure whether it might some day spring on them in earnest, fangs and claws bared.

The question that preys on the minds of Danish defence officials is: How would the west react? More specifically, how would NATO react to a quick Soviet bloc thrust across the short stretch of water between Russia or Poland and the strategic Danish island of Bornholm, out in the middle of the Baltic 100 miles east of here?

Danish Nightmare

What would NATO do for Denmark, and for the Baltic approaches area generally, which includes the North German province of Schleswig-Holstein, in a time of rising east-west tensions?

The Danes live with a nightmare, that in such an emergency situation, all thoughts would be rivetted on the crucial central front of Germany, and on countering any Soviet thrust aimed at the heart of western Europe. The Baltic would be left more or less to its own devices.

"There is too much talk about the central front," says Maj.-Gen. Christian Vegger, commander of NATO's Baltic Approaches command. "Our area is very often forgotten."

He goes on to make the valid point that as NATO's central front gains in power — a response to the Soviet buildup of armor and air power in recent years — the western alliance's flanks will be increasingly exposed. The flanks comprise the Baltic and Norwegian coast in the north, Turkey and Greece in the south.

Gen. Alexander Haig, supreme allied commander in Europe, acknowledged at a recent press conference that a Warsaw Pact move on the flanks "can have all the implications of a superpower confrontation."

But the Danes are consumed with doubt as to whether the West, when the chips are down, would actually risk a big confrontation over some Soviet adventure in the Baltic.

That is why their military leaders keep hammering away at the theme that all may be lost unless NATO's political leaders muster the necessary "political will" to counter any real or threatened Russian incursions in the Baltic.

"We would like to have reinforcements here before the fighting starts," Gen. Vegger told a group of American and Canadian correspondents recently, emphasizing the word "before."

He postulated the likelihood of a twilight period of rising east-west temperatures preceding any large outbreak. "The present conditions (for supplying reinforcements) are not sufficient."

The Danes feel they could hold their own against anything but an all-out Soviet bloc thrust across the Baltic. Their well-equipped forces have a peacetime strength of 35,000, but this would quickly be increased to more than 100,000 with mobilization.

Their concern is that western political and military leaders will not come through with the additional manpower and other resources necessary for the Danes to conduct a more sustained fight. The Warsaw Pact has about 14 divisions, including one airborne in the immediate vicinity of the Baltic. Another seven divisions could be quickly brought in.

Both British and American troops come to exercise with Danish and German troops in peacetime manoeuvres, but there is no guarantee that they would be assigned here, rather than to some other part of the long east-west frontier, in an emergency. Similarly, a Canadian battalion assigned to the northern flank could be sent here, or it could be sent to northern Norway.

Soviet bloc forces conduct amphibious operations farther and farther west in the Baltic, designed, at least in part, to fray Danish nerves. Soviet bombers streak up to the edge of Danish air space, then at the last moment turn away and head home, while this country's air defense system holds its collective breath.

Warsaw Pact forces maintain permanent as well as seasonal surveillance patrols around the Danish islands of Zealand, on which Copenhagen is located. It is psychological warfare in a peacetime setting, and a country of five million feel the strain.

To understand how important it is for the Soviets to try to neutralize Denmark, it's necessary to stand a map of Europe on its side. Looking westward from, say, the Soviet naval base at Riga, past the southern tip of neutral Sweden, the Danish islands and the peninsula of Jutland appear as one giant obstacle to Soviet designs in northwestern Europe.

Soviet Discomfort

The fact that a NATO country controls the narrow straits from the Baltic to the Kattegat and out into the northern seas is enough to make Soviet military planners squirm with discomfort. In peacetime, the principle of innocent passage applies; Soviet warships can go through without hindrance, just as all warships can. But in wartime, the Danes, in co-operation with NATO, would surely take steps to close these vital waterways to their enemies.

The Soviet Union's discomfort at such a prospect is not mitigated by the realization that the bulk of its shipbuilding and ship repair facilities are located at ports on the Baltic.

Danish officials detect what they describe as a general "tensioning" of the situation in the Baltic in the last year or so, perhaps best exemplified by the fact that the Soviet navy now has six nuclear missile submarines stationed there in at least partial defiance of Moscow's own widely-advertised proposal for a nuclear-free zone in northern Europe.

Trudeau Imitates the Chief

OTTAWA — Pierre Elliot Trudeau may or may not be much of a prime minister, but he sure would make one hell of an opposition leader.

Think of John Diefenbaker in his prime just over two decades ago. Or, if you then were only as high as the seat of your Jolly Jumper, get your parents to describe, lovingly as they will, the chief, thundering at the Liberals for "impenetrable arrogance" and for "trampling on the rights of parliament."

Forget that later, Dief rather spoiled things by actually winning power himself. Back then, in 1957, he made Canadians care again about their politics. He did it by sending Canadians the message that he cared and that they therefore should.

Dief Cared

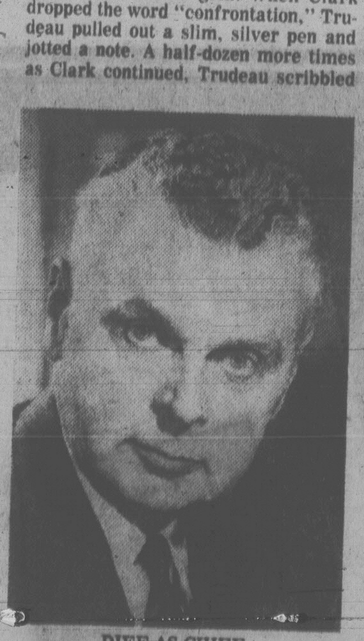
On Thursday, Trudeau did the same. For two extraordinary hours, Trudeau came down from his aloof, proud tower and mixed it on the Commons floor like a street fighter. Or like, if Dief at his best really is beyond your memory's recall, Muhammad Ali mustering all his reserves of experience and guile and courage for one last bout.

The marvel to the occasion was that Conservative leader Joe Clark himself was superb. He, and Trudeau, and later New Democrat leader Ed Broadbent, battling scrappily against his inevitable over-shadowing, demonstrated that parliament, if it is "an institution in trouble" as Clark called it, at its best is still the only institution that can force the best out of those bold enough to dare to offer themselves to Canadians as the country's best and brightest.

In a dark, bankerly blue, in deliberate contrast to Trudeau's trendy light blue, Clark cast himself as a prime minister in waiting. Matching the tone of responsibility set by Conservative MPs who clapped rather than thumped their desks, Clark offered "our own version of the throne speech" to spur the economy and to salve national unity, and promised "to help this government ... if you've no ideas of your own, borrow ours."

Clark's quips cut, but cleanly. He quoted Trudeau, and then added: "Of course to quote the prime minister correctly I should hook my thumbs in my belt." Trudeau, he said, "ruled by an isolated elite," and "posed as a tough guy by instigating confrontation" with the provinces.

As Clark spoke, Trudeau sat motionless, hands cupped at the edge of his desk, head bent forward, acknowledging a well-aimed shaft by an occasional quick, half-hidden grin. When Clark dropped the word "confrontation," Trudeau pulled out a slim, silver pen and jotted a note. A half-dozen more times as Clark continued, Trudeau scribbled at the margin on the first page of his text. Then, when his turn came, Trudeau used his notes as cue cards for a demagogic epic — probably his finest performance in a decade in the Commons.



DIEF AS CHIEF
... Thursday's model in Commons

He mugged. He mimicked. He mimed. In one instant he arched his back against his desk, in another he danced out to the edge of the aisle. He picked up Clark's words, shook them, and then set them down again, upside-down. Clark had declared that Canada had slipped, during Trudeau's term, from second to seventh in the table of international affluence. Clark, though, hadn't told the Commons which countries had overtaken us. "I will tell you," said Trudeau. "Kuwait. Bahrein. Quatar. The Arab Emirates. The emirs are doing fine."

After the ridicule came the invective, delivered with the same, deadly aim as during the 1974 campaign when Trudeau narrowed the debate to the only issue that, in politics, counts in the end — leadership.

Then, Trudeau used wage and price controls to demolish Conservative leader Robert Stanfield. This time he used federal-provincial relations to mount the same, unnerving, assault upon Clark.

The issue, said Trudeau, is to preserve "a federal government that still can speak for all Canadians." Clark would "demolish" the federal government, and reduce Canada from a confederation of 10 premiers and one prime minister to "just 11 premiers."

Liberals Roar

Clark, said Trudeau, "would give away the shop ... He just lost his shirt." Whatever the provinces wanted, he would give them, saying, "Ready, Aye Ready, to Brother Lougheed, to Brother Davis."

As the Liberal MPs, amazed and delighted, roared their applause, Trudeau hurled at Clark the intimidating challenge: "At some point, he will have to take a stand."

In 1974, Trudeau ran, not as prime minister but as leader of the opposition to wage and price controls, and won an election he had been expected to lose. Today, defeat agains seems inevitable. Again, Trudeau has cast himself as leader of the opposition to, this time, the sub-government of the provincial premiers.

None of this, you may say, has much to go with the price of tea, or with keeping the mail moving. It hasn't. It does though have a good deal to do with preventing the ambitions of the provinces from reducing Canda to an ungovernable agglomeration of independent principalities. And it does have everthing to do with politics. Enough, at the very least, to make our politics worth caring about again.

Watch the Ants

Most Canadians are under the impression that they are living in a free country, owing their allegiance to the Crown and to the freely-elected provincial and federal governments. But if we examine this question more closely we discover that this is no longer so. A very large section of the community are trade unionists; allegiance to their particular union takes precedence over the country at large and the community in general.

The tenets of democracy call for the support of the populace for such freely-elected governments and for the institutions of their country — the judiciary, police, etc. But the most important aspect of the democratic system is that all of us should realize that we are all part of a very fragile social and economic structure, and if all do not take their part, ultimately the whole edifice could collapse.

Can the reader imagine what would happen if the bees in a particular beehive or the ants in their anthill refused to do their alotted jobs? They would receive short shrift from the soldier bees and ants and that would be that.

The root of the trouble is that the wages of the relatively unskilled workers have been allowed to go too high, all without very much initial training required. What attitude can be expected from people who have spent years either in university or technical college training? Nothing but dissatisfaction. Our pseudo-economists tell us that wages are not a large factor in the rising cost of living. That is surely pure nonsense.

The first duty of any new government, if we get one next spring, is to take this strike situation in hand and remedy it as well as it can. — A. G. Builder, 3-1030 Bay Street.

Something's Up

On Thursday, Premier Bennett announced that B.C. is going to start on a $60 million shipbuilding boom, the biggest in B.C.'s history.

Question: why? There must be something up. He must be planning an election, and he wants to make it look good. Two years ago, he put aside $55 million for shipbuilding in B.C. Why did he wait so long to use it?

One can now ask: where did the money for such a venture come from?

From the surplus they obtained when they increased taxes, and in doing so broke their election promise not to increase them?

From the $79.8 million that they recorded as receiving from the sale of the three new vessels that were built under the NDP administration?

Why does Mr. Bennett not let the ferry corporation announce that they are going to build these ferries? When Mr. Bennett created the corporation through legislation, which was to remove it from the sphere of political influence, he gave it a guaranteed borrowing capacity of $250 million. Why not let the corporation arrange financing (as he did when he sold their previous ferries, so we could buy them back again).

Perhaps Mr. Bennett is looking for a way to use up some of the surplus and create some jobs, for a while anyway, and when he calls his election he can say: Look at the good things I've done. (This is like giving candy to a child so he does what you want him to, or what is more commonly referred to in some circles as a bribe. After he gets what he wants, he will take it away until the next time he wants something.)—James Bates, 3-854 Admirals Road.

'Let Patty Go Free'

By LARRY KRAMER

(Washington Post writer Kramer covered the Hearst kidnapping and trial for the San Francisco Examiner.)

HEARST . . . spotlight has been harsh

It was easy not to trust Patty Hearst. She made it easy. First, she held up a clenched, handcuffed fist, and bragged to friends about her newly developed militancy. Then, suddenly, the next pictures showed a demure young lady sitting on a century-old sofa with her hands crossed over her skirt and a gold cross hanging from her neck, propped up by the soft silk bow tie on the top of a desinger bouse, looking for all the world like her life as the society child she was before she was kidnapped.

Who did she think she was kidding? my friends would ask.

She certainly was hard to figure. And we at the San Francisco Examiner, her father's newspaper, had an especially difficult time trying. Randy Hearst never told his newspaper what to print, or not to print. In fact, he never told us anything. But we bent over backwards to convince our readers that we were being fair. That resulted in two problems: boring but accurate coverage of the trial, and a certain tendency not to print overtly favorable stories. We became programmed, indirectly, to be even tougher and more critical than others covering the same event.

But working for the Hearst-owned Examiner also allowed many of us, especially those who knew the family, certain insights into the private lives of a family torn by terrorism.

There were ugly, loud shouting matches in corporate board meetings where the decision over whether to use corporate money to pay the kidnappers' ransom demands was made. No, said some board members, even some family members; if we pay them we will only be encouraging them. Yes, said Randy Hearst, this is my daughter.

And then there was the parade of psychiatrists, psychologists, swamis and other assorted soothsayers into the Hearst home while Patty was still on the run. But the best of the medical advisers had a worrisome message. If your daughter stays kidnapped much longer, the Hearsts were told, she will not know if she is doing what she is doing because she is being told to, or because she wants to. She will be very confused. So to the Hearsts, if to no one else, the eventual outcome was somewhat predictable, and easier to believe.

Then came the shootout in Los Angeles. Hearst watched the shootout on television, a few blocks away. Told by her kidnappers that the FBI would kill her just as soon as she was caught, she protested. It was believed that she was in that burning house in Los Angeles, and no one was saved. Maybe the SLA was right, maybe the FBI didn't care what happened to her, she thought to herself.

Even after her capture, her life was run by others and virtually out of her control. First one lawyer, then the next, dictated her manner of speaking, her dress code, her actions. One lawyer had a third party write the story of Patty Hearst's months in captivity, and the victim was induced to sign it. Another attorney put her on the stand at her own trial, and counseled her to take the Fifth Amendment dozens of times.

That attorney, F. Lee Bailey, served only to further alienate a jury that was not about to appear as if it was swayed by the wealth and fame of the defendant. The last thing the jury would believe was Bailey's final argument — his patented, off-the-cuff, 45-minute, impassioned plea for a young woman's life.

But the end result is that the Hearst heir has been a prisoner since the day she was kidnapped, victimized by everyone she has come in contact with. While she certainly cannot be held blameless for following advice she could have ignored, that is no longer the question.

The questions before us now are simple: What goal is being served by keeping Patty Hearst in jail? Does she, if released, pose a risk to society?

A frustrated Hearst family broke its self-imposed editorial silence on the kidnapping case Sunday with an emotional call on the front pages of all seven Hearst papers for her release from prison, where she has been on and off since her capture three years ago, and where she is today.

Ironically, the Hearst press was once so powerful years ago that a campaign on its part to free a nationally known criminal might have worked. Now, when one of its own is the victim, it has become a voice shouting in a nearly empty room.

But others are calling for her release. More than 40 congressmen have joined dozens of law-enforcement officials — including Charles Bates, the FBI agent who spent two years leading the search for her — in calling on President Carter to pardon Patty hearst.

Perhaps the most reasoned call for an early release of Patty Hearst came from another California courtroom last week. And it came not from her family, but indirectly from her abductors. William and Emily Harris, who participated in the same bank robbery for which Hearst is serving time — although they have never been charged in that robbery — were sentenced to jail for from five to 20 years for their role in her kidnapping. As they left the court, they proclaimed that they could be back on the street as early as 1983.

That means they could be free before the victim of their crime.

Can Tokyo be Made A Place for Humans?

By MARK MURRAY

TOKYO — The Japanese government has decided to shoulder the crushing burden of making Tokyo fit for human habitation.

It has decided that the nation's capital is now so overcrowded and beset with problems that the only answer is virtually to rebuild from scratch.

The National Land Agency has announced a five-year program to produce a comprehensive plan for re-making Tokyo into a livable metropolis.

Over the next 30 or 40 years, it envisages merging Tokyo with the three adjacent prefectures of Saitama, Chiba and Kanagawa, leading to decentralization of metropolitan functions, redevelopment of the central core and drastic re-allocation of industry.

Fat and swollen

Twice this century, government planners had the chance to build an attractive city, when Tokyo was destroyed by earthquake in 1923 and again by fire bombing in 1945.

But each time reconstruction developed without a master plan. Thus, an almost total lack of forethought allowed factories to spring up in the midst of heavily congested residential areas which are already labelled "certain disaster zones" should a major earthquake strike, as many scientists anticipate.

Tokyo has grown fat and swollen, swallowing up former satellite cities into a sprawling nightmare of 12 million people that can take half a day to cross.

Housing is inadequate and cramped, and a garden is an almost impossible luxury for the vast majority. High prices have forced salaried workers further and further out into the grey suburbs, with three to four hours of daily commuting common for the millions funnelling into the central area where the country's top universities, major businesses and all government offices are concentrated.

One of the world's most advanced public transport systems is dangerously overloaded and roads are hopelessly inadequate to cope with a car ownership boom over the past 15 years. The city's ability to provide essential services is near breaking point. A drought this summer which led to water rationing provided a foretaste of things to come.

This is the third time there has been talk of remodelling. In the early 1960s the late Ichiro Kono, when he was construction minister, suggested a new capital be built in an undeveloped part of the country. In the mid-1970s, during an earthquake scare, officials considered a more limited goal of moving essential government offices out to a safer location.

The new Land Agency plan also includes a proposal for construction of a new capital.

Tokyo will then be converted into a super metropolis of an estimated 35 million people (currently 27 million) by merger with the surrounding prefectures.

The agency envisages decentralizing the present concentration of education and business in central Tokyo, with the emphasis on orderly development of existing and new satellite cities with enough job opportunities and amenities to keep their populations at home.

Death-trap homes

After that, the older inner city areas will have to be knocked down and rebuilt. These are now a nightmare of narrow streets and claustrophobic wooden houses, often below sea level, which experts warn will be death traps in an earthquake — either from fire or inundation from the sea.

No one has yet costed the government plan, and it is unlikely the present generation of Tokyoites will see much benefit. For them the city will remain an unliveable necessity.

Touching All Historical Bases Produces a Diamond

By HENRY FAIRLIE
The Washington Post

American historians are always searching for a great theme in American history: a grand purpose for which the country was originally created, and which it steadily pursues from generation to generation, until its ultimate fulfilment in some still undiscerned apotheosis.

The main trouble with this quaint notion is that the historians cannot agree what the great purpose is. The destiny that is so manifest to one is rejected by another. But it seems to me that the grand theme is obvious if only one goes back and rereads American history and even its literature with a fresh eye.

In William Bradford's account of the "History of Plimmouth Plantation," we are given the first description of the laying out of an American town on strict geometrical principles. Take a piece of land and draw a square on it and, if you stand at one corner of the square, it looks at least something like a diamond, certainly enough like one to call it a diamond. This is what was done at Plymouth. The first Thanksgiving Day celebrated the drawing of the first diamond on American soil.

At certain points on the boundaries of the square the buildings were strengthened for the protection of the colony. Bradford does not actually use the word, but it is not hard to imagine that these were known as bases.

There is also evidence that quite near there were two teams in Massachusetts — the Pilgrims and the Indians — and that they played in the first of a long "series" of encounters — this initial one called the Pequot War. The first major National League was formed in 1643, with the title of the New England Confederation. The true purpose of American history was being unfolded from the very beginning.

* * *

The colonists of course learned all they could from the Indians, before withdrawing their franchise to play on their ancestral grounds, and we must believe that from time to time they observed a squaw, tired of stringing together yet more wampum, making balls with a cork and rubber core, winding them with some primitive yarn, and finally enclosing them in leather covers, which they stitched with great care. (Where the Indians in Massachusetts found the cork is lost in history.)

The Puritans looked upon these balls and took their measurements, which the Indians had of course discovered only by instinct, no less than 5 and no more than 5 1-4 ounces, no less than 9 and no more than 9 1-4 inches in circumference, and decided that even if they were too large to be used as money like wampum, money could at least be made to flow from them. In vain did Cotton Mather inveigh from his pulpit, "These balls are an abomination and base in the sight of the Lord." But the word stuck.

If this story seems improbable, it is no more improbable than the official version, which is actually no more than a guess. According to this, some "resourceful youngsters" in the 18th or early 19th centuries, "began to make their own balls," to play rounders, "by using something for a centre, perhaps bunched-up rags, wrapping the whole with string, until it became sizable enough to serve as a ball."

How can we be expected to believe that this was the unprovidential way in which the great purpose of America was unfolded to the world?

The Indians were expert in throwing these balls, and far outpitched the Pilgrims in many encounters in the "series," until in another colony known as Boston, one of the settlers picked up a strip of wood, too small to use to make a log cabin, and hit one of the balls with it, so hard that it soared over the infields, which were those inside the settlement, far into the outfields, where danger had always lurked until then.

All that we know of this hero is that he was drunk and wearing red socks, but John Winthrop at once detected in his action the hand of providence, even while he ordered the first Red Sox to be put in the stocks.

As the colonists multiplied and grew prosperous, they copied the magical properties of the strip of wood, but it was not until a century later that Benjamin Franklin took its measurements and determined that it served its purpose only if it was not more than 2 inches in diameter at its thickest part, and not longer than 42 inches. This left a lot of strips of wood that were unsuitable for the purpose, and for these Franklin invented stoves, so that the colonists could get rid of the wood.

* * *

Cricket was introduced to the colonies in 1751. This was the first real act of provocation by the British. What time did the pioneers have to play a game that might last three days or more. What is more, the equipment had to be imported from England, with heavy duties on it.

Long before the Boston Tea Party, the citizens of Williamsburg had taken to throwing cricket balls into the James River, where they bobbed up and down ignominiously, finally convincing the harassed governor that noblesse oblige was not to be found in even the best Virginia families.

The shot that rang around the world sent shivers through every gentleman's club in London, for they listened to the sound of it, and it was not the sound of cricket bat aginst cricket ball, but a far more uncouth and even democratic noise. "If hickory should ever replace willow in the hands of our youth," Lord North told the House of Lords, "there will not be one institution of the kingdom that is safe," and nothing that Burke could say could counter this plea.

In one of the drafts of the Declaration of Independence, we find these words in the unmistakable handwriting of Jefferson: "We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Players are created equal, that they are endowed by the Little League with certain inalienable rights, that among these are Base-Ball, Bat, and the Pursuit of Baseness." Adams crossed out those last words.

* * *

The English troops of course didn't have a chance in the American forests. They expected to find opponents who would play cricket — after all they used a bat and a ball — but instead they found opponents who had changed all the rules. They had been trained to run between one set of sticks and another, but the Americans ran all around the field, sometimes four of them at the same time, when they then claimed four runs even when thee of them had not even hit the ball. The Americans also "stole" British bases.

So we come to the preamble to the Constitution: "We the people of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Sport . . . do ordain and establish this Constitution for the Major Leagues of America."

[illegible]ing had been done. America had fulfilled its promise, to establish a New World that no one else could understand, and where it would always win. The poets joined in the celebration. Will a pitcher in fact pitch or not? The tension is caught in that reiterated rhythm of some little known lines of "Hiawatha": So he went to pitch the baseball. Seemed about to pitch the baseball, Decided not to pitch the baseball. In his glove still held the baseball.

The game was now ready to be carried across the continent.

The Americans are often thought to be a very materialistic people, and it is assumed that they rushed to California in 1849 at the shout of a "Gold!" But there is one moving scrap of paper left by one of the prospectors, who did not in fact make it across the desert and the mountains: "We go to prepare the way for the Dodgers."

Even the conventional records of history support my thesis. We all know that there was a great deal of turmoil in America between 1861 and 1865. A nation was being hammered into one in the anvil of war, and indeed the historical events show what was happening:

1860-61: "So many arguments as to whether ball was fair or foul that whitewash was used to mark the dividing line." That is enough cause for a civil war.

1862: "First baseball enclosure (Union Grounds, Brooklyn) opened May 15." The sheer provocation of calling it Union Grounds is enough to prolong any civil war.

1864: "William A. "Candy" Cummings, pitching for Brooklyn Stars against Brooklyn Atlantics, was credited with throwing a ball which curved on its way to plate. Scientists declared that this was impossible." In Europe the scientists were only playing about with ideas of evolution.

1865: "Eddie Cuthbert of Philadelphia Keystones credited with being the first player to attempt a steal of base, climaxing it with slide," which is not all that inadequate on account of how the North in fact won the war in the end.

* * *

And for this I left my cricket grounds to come to America? Yes. You would have found me in front of my television set last weekend, because as one American historian said to me last week, "The Yankees have been playing the Dodgers since the world began." For that sailed the Mayflower.

Toronto

Declines led advances 374 to 85 with 209 issues unchanged.

Among other industrials, Bow Valley Industries dropped 2 to $42¾, Pacific Petroleums 1⅛ to $41⅛, Westburne International 1½ to $35½, Algoma Steel 1 to $24 and Canadian Industries 1 to $21.

Royal Bank gained ¾ to $37⅝, Canadian Tire A ¼ to $25¾, Dome Petroleum ¼ to $82¾, Interprovincial Pipe Line A ⅛ to $16⅝ and Oshawa Group A ⅛ to $7¼.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, beset by interest-rate worries and concern over the U.S. dollar's problems, took a pounding for the second straight session today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 21.92 points Monday for its largest decline in nearly four years, dropped another 12.30 to 862.87 by 2 p.m.

Losers swamped gainers by a 10-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Monday's decline in the Dow was its steepest since it fell 22.69 Nov. 18, 1974 in the final throes of the 1973-74 bear market.

Analysts said that sudden slide in stock prices had prompted additional selling. They also noted speculation that the Federal Reserve might seek to push interest rates still higher in the near future.

Among biggest losers were the airline stocks, thanks to some negative comments from an analyst quoted in the Wall Street Journal. Pan Am led the active list, down ½ to $7¾; UAL fell 3 to $35, and Eastern was off 1¼ to $10⅞, all in active trading.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were broadly lower in afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange, with the 85-stock composite index down 3.15 at 217.48. Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 489,525 shares traded, up from 410,480 shares traded up to the same time Monday. Simpson's Ltd. lost ⅛ at $6⅜, Rio Algoma ¼ at $37, Alcan ⅝ at $36¾ and Canada Cement Lafarge A ½ at $12½.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices moved moderately higher near the close of light trading today on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 3.8 to 498.4 an hour before the close. Leading industrials gained following favorable corporate reports, while oil issues were mixed. Mining shares firmed despite easing in the bullion price after a record high fixing. Canadian stocks declined.

Ltd., bringing its total to 1,292,000 or 26.26 per cent.

Argus said in a statement it has also been granted first refusal to purchase an additional 696,593—14.16 per cent—Hollinger voting shares over a five-year period.

"In connection with certain of such first refusal arrangements, the shareholders of Hollinger with whom such arrangements were made have been given the right to put all or any part of their voting shares of Hollinger to Argus for a period of approximately five years at varying prices per share," Argus said.

Kaiser Res.

Kaiser Resources reported third-quarter consolidated net earnings of almost $21.3 million or 79 cents a share, compared with restated 1977 third-quarter earnings of almost $13.6 million or 51 cents a share.

Edgar F. Kaiser Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said net earnings in the third quarter this year were higher primarily as a result of a record level of metallurgical coal shipments and increased coal prices.

Sales for the 1978 third quarter were $101.5 million, compared to $71.3 million in the 1977 third quarter.

For the first nine months of this year, Kaiser had consolidated net earnings of almost $46.9 million dollars or $1.75 a share, compared with restated earnings of nearly $44.3 million or $1.65 a share in the same period of 1977.

GHI Mortgage

GHI Mortgage Investors of Winnipeg reported net income of $502,858 or $1.14 per trust unit for the nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with $461,851 or $1.07 per unit for the same period a year ago.

The company said the trustees have approved a third quarter income distribution to unitholders of 39 cents a unit compared with 34 cents a unit last year. The income distribution is payable Oct. 16.

Argus Corp.

Argus Corp. Ltd. announced it has acquired an additional 115,000 voting shares of Hollinger Mines

New Pope Doughty Defender of Polish Church

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, the first non-Italian pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church in 455 years, is a scholar, a sportsman and a poet who played a leading role in the Polish church's defence of religious freedom in his Communist-ruled homeland.

The son of working class parents and a factory worker in his youth, Karol Cardinal Wojtyla as archbishop of Krakow stood by the workers and the students, defending the rights of both Catholics and non-Catholics.

"Every year the workers celebrate the anniversary of his ordination," said the Rev. Bogumil Lewandowski, the press secretary of the Polish Bishops' Conference. "He is also a great friend of the students."

A soft-spoken man with a discreet smile and craggy features, the new Pope is a great sportsman. He gave up canoeing in the mountain streams near Krakow several years ago but continued to ski, swim, climb mountains and go on camping trips.

He also loves to play ping-pong and is reported to be a good singer, specializing in Polish mountain songs.

The new pope was born in Wadowice, near Krakow, in southern Poland on May 18, 1920. His mother died when he was nine and his father, a non-commissioned officer in the Polish army, died at the beginning of the Second World War. Oswiecim, the site of the Nazis' Auschwitz extermination camp, is 26 kilometres from Wadowice.

His family was poor and he worked to help out while attending high school and the university in Krakow.

During the war years, he worked in a stone quarry and then in a sodium and chemical products factory. While working in the factory, he secretly studied theology, set up a recreational centre for his fellow workers and was an actor in a clandestine theatre group.

After studying theology and philosophy at the major seminary in Krakow, he was ordained a priest at the age of 26. Then he went to Rome and earned a doctorate in philosophy at the Pontifical University of St. Thomas two years later.

Returning to Poland, he did pastoral work in several parishes, took a doctorate in theology at the University of Krakow and then taught moral theology there and at the Catholic University of Lublin.

He was named an auxiliary bishop in Krakow in 1958 and became archbishop there in 1964.

As archbishop, he persistently fought the Communist government's restrictions on the construction of new churches and the establishment of Catholic publishing houses and information centres.

During the 1966 celebration of the Polish church's millennium, he led a procession of 500,000 people through the streets of Krakow. It was one of Poland's biggest post-war religious manifestations.

Pope Paul VI made him a cardinal in 1967.

Wojtyla's relations with Poland's Communist government were businesslike, and in church meetings he urged against head-on clashes with Communist atheists. But he often had to plead with government officials for understanding.

Canadian Press

The election of Poland's Karol Cardinal Wojtyla as Pope John Paul II on Monday shocked, surprised and brought forth praise from around the world.

Most Rev. G. Emmett Carter, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto said in an interview Monday night the election of a non-Italian "shows there's some life in the old Church yet."

Archbishop Carter, who had met Cardinal Wojtyla on a number of occasions, described the new 58-year-old pontiff as a firm, quiet man.

"He is a pastoral and holy man — a very kind man," Archbishop Carter said.

Dr. Adam Bromke, chairman of the political science department at McMaster University at Hamilton, Ont., said the three main features of the new Pope are his background as an intellectual, his concern for ecumenical movement and the fact that as a cardinal he has been readily accessible.

The archbishop of Montreal and representatives of Quebec's 30,000-member Polish community expressed "great joy, enthusiasm and optimism" at Cardinal Wojtyla's election.

The Vicar-General of the Diocese of Montreal, Msgr. Jean-Marie Lafontaine, said: "It has been to the great honor of the Church in Poland to continue confessing its faith in Jesus Christ, especially since the end of the Second World War.

"Its faith has been put to a hard test during the long night of doubt and sadness following the installation of the Communist regime, coming from the socialist-communist world is a momentous event for the church.

"I could even say that it is one of the greatest events in the history of the Catholic Church. The repercussions will be considerable."

In Spain, Foreign Minister Marcelino Oreja Aguirre said the election is one of the most important events in the modern history of the Catholic Church.

It "reaffirmed the universal vocation of the church as well as its capacity to respond to the problems of our time," he said.

The archbishop of Saragossa, Msgr. Elias Yanes said the election of a non-Italian pope signifies a certain rejuvenation of the church.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim congratulated the new Pope on his election and said he would spare no effort to strengthen the existing ties between the Holy See and the UN.

In West Germany, the Pope's election topped news broadcasts, with commentators putting special emphasis on the fact that he is the first pontiff from the Communist bloc.

In Geneva, the World Council of Churches, which groups more than 200 churches around the globe, said: "The new Pope brings to his office and its worldwide responsiblities the rich tradition and spirituality of the Polish people as well as his pastoral and ecumenical experience as archbishop of Crakow."

Political analysts who study the Communist-bloc countries said in Vienna the election of a Polish pope might be viewed as a boost for religious freedom in Eastern Europe.

Cardinal Wojtyla visited Montreal in August, 1969, and celebrated a mass with Archbishop Paul-Emile Gregoire at Notre Dame Cathedral. He also met with representatives of the Polish Canadian Welfare Institute, a branch of Canadian Polish Congress, which deals with senior citizens of Polish origin.

Marian Wekowski, a spokesman for Canadian Polish Congress, said the new Pope is known in Poland for being an intellectual and "progressive, who confronted Communist authorities on church issues," while the primate of the Polish church has been more conciliatory.

The Polish government, meanwhile, hailed Cardinal Wojtyla's selection as "a special sign for Poland."

Government spokesman Wlodzimierz Janiurek said in Warsaw: "The conclave chose a Pole — a man whose biography has everything. He went through the hell of war.

"This is why we react with particular attention to his election and the fact that he has chosen the name of John Paul II, thus tying his pontificate to those of his great predecessors."

Poland was under Nazi German occupation during the Second World War and the future new Pope remained in his native country during the war, studying for the priesthood in secrecy.

Rev. Alojzy Orszulik, spokesman for the Polish Episcopate, said: "It's a great joy . . . that a Polish cardinal is able to direct the universal church in this so difficult period of the end of the 20th century."

★ ★ ★

In the United States, the election of Cardinal Wojtyla as the first Polish Pope was hailed by the Polish community, a major contingent among the 49 million U.S. Roman Catholics.

The auxiliary archbishop of Chicago, Rev. Alfred Abramowicz, hailed the new Pope as "a man of hope, a man of great love, a man of the people."

The archbishop, of Polish extraction, said: "Naturally, we were surprised but at the same time deliriously happy."

In France and Spain, Catholic leaders hailed the election of the first non-Italian pope in five centuries as an event of major importance for the church.

Chairman of the French Bishop's Council, Archbishop Roger Etchegaray of Marseilles said: "The election of a non-Italian pope . . . com-

In September, 1969, Karol Cardinal Wojtyla, metropolitan archbishop of Krakow, addressed 650 members of the Polish-Canadian community at a dinner.

Asked to describe the man, Galenchuk said Monday, "I could best describe him as having a princely presence."

Pope Against Birth Control

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Polish Pope John Paul II told the world today his primary duty will be to carry out reforms introduced by the Second Vatican Council along guidelines laid down by Pope Paul VI and Pope John Paul I.

The church's first non-Italian pontiff in 455 years thus indicated in his first sermon of his reign that he would maintain the church's bans on artificial contraception, divorce and married priests.

John Paul warned that loyalty to the Vatican Council must not affect loyalty to the basic doctrinal truths of the church.

"Loyalty is the respect of the liturgical rules. Loyalty also means the cult for the great discipline of the church" which must be "protected from the threats which are carried to certain truths," he said at a mass celebrated in the Sistine Chapel with the 110 cardinals who elected him the church's 264th ruler on Monday.

The Pope — to be formally installed during a mass this Sunday — said his two immediate predecessors set guidelines for the application of the council's resolutions "and we intend to continue on the road they have indicated."

Like his predecessor, John Paul I, the new pontiff will not be formally crowned.

The official Vatican statement said Pope John Paul II will celebrate a solemn mass on Sunday to start his reign as spiritual leader of the world's 700 million Roman Catholics.

It was not immediately known whether the ceremony would take place inside or outside St. Peter's Basilica.

The Pope told the cardinals he would try to promote ecumenical relations with other churches and faiths and a "collegial spirit" between him and his bishops.

"The special cohesion or collegiality that 'with Peter and under Peter' unites among themselves the sacred pastors is an element on which we can never concentrate long enough," he said.

John Paul said he would take a stand in political controversies only "for religious and moral purposes." His only reference to a specific political issue was to the Syrian-Christian fighting in "the beloved land of Lebanon . . . for which we all ardently wish peace in freedom."

His adoption of the name of "the pastoral pope," John Paul, was taken as an indication he intends to stress the pastoral side of the papacy and the pope's role as the shepherd of the church and to look to all the bishops of the church for advice, not just to the Italian cardinals of the Vatican Curia.

He was expected to continue the moderate reforms of the church, the dialogue with other Christian religions and the efforts to improve relations with Communist governments launched by popes John XXIII and Paul VI.

When speaking to the 150,000 persons packed into St. Peter's Square and millions more watching on television, the new pontiff exhibited an informality reminiscent of Pope John Paul I and Pope John XXIII. He ignored the formal papal "we," addressed himself to "brothers and sisters" and asked the crowd's forgiveness for his accented Italian.

"I was afraid to receive this nomination but I did it in the spirit of obedience to our Lord," he told the crowd. Then he crossed his arms three times over his gold-trimmed stole as if to embrace the throng cheering him in the floodlit, moonlit square.

In moving to the Vatican, the new Pope will still find himself surrounded by Communists, with a Communist-led municipal administration in Rome and Italy's ruling Catholic party, the Christian Democrats, dependent on the support of the Italian Communist party for the parliamentary majority necessary to govern.

But the Communist-line Rome newspaper Paese Sera commented that the election of a Polish pope "broke the umbilical cord" between the Vatican and the Italian government.

The end of the road for former Liberal cabinet minister Bryce Mackasey...and the knowledge shows on his face and in his dejected posture. The one-time Quebec lietentant to Prime Minister Trudeau was trounced in a come-back attempt in Ottawa Centre Monday, runnning third behind the winning Conservative and an NDP challenger in what had been considered for the past three generations a Grit stronghold.

Quebec Remains Grit Stronghold

By PETER HADEKEL
Times Quebec Bureau

QUEBEC CITY — Quebec bucked the anti-government trend sweeping the country by electing Liberals in two of the three federal byelections in the province Monday.

The Liberals held on to the Montreal riding of Westmount and captured the rural riding of St. Hyacinthe from the Conservatives.

The Social Credit party held on to the eastern Quebec riding of Lotbiniere, demonstrating that it is still the main federal opposition for the Liberals in Quebec.

The shutout suffered by the Conservatives is further proof that the party is making no inroads in Quebec under Joe Clark's leadership.

Liberal organizers were jubilant at their victory in St. Hyacinthe, a Conserative stronghold for the last 21 years. The Liberals elected Marcel Ostiguy, a 48-year-old former member of the provincial legislature.

The Liberal victory in Westmount, Don Johnston, is almost certain cabinet material. A 41 year-old tax law specialist who has been a long-time friend and advisor to Prime Minister Trudeau, Johnston is touted as the future spokesman for English Quebecers in the cabinet.

Revenue is mentioned as a possible portfolio for him, although Johnston himself denies there have been any promises made to him of a cabinet post.

The bilingual lawyer, who won an important court case recently striking down part of Quebèc's controversial language law, won handily over Tory candidate Bernard Finestone.

Finestone, the articulate former president of the Montreal Board of Trade, ran a vigorous campaign but could not match the Liberal organization built up by previous MP Bud Drury.

Johnston said his victory was "vote of approval" by the affluent riding of the Trudeau government's economis measures, which were heavily criticized by his Conservative opponent.

The Liberals had hoped to make a clean sweep of Quebec ridings by winning Lotbiniere. But the Social Credit organization built up by the late party leader Andre Fortin who represented the riding was too strong.

governing party since it was created in 1952.

Liberal Paul Cosgrove, former mayor of Scarborough, had been considered a shoo-in but he was defeated by a determined organization headed by Paul McCrossan.

VICTORIA CYCLIST'S APPEAL QUASHED

"That right has always been regarded as absolute and as being firmly anchored to two fundamental common law principles — the presumption of innocence and the privilege against self-incrimination."

He said a person cannot be guilty of obstructing a police officer "merely by doing nothing, unless there is a legal duty to act."

He said there was nothing in the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act compelling a cyclist caught riding through a red light to identify himself.

Police had the clear power to arrest for the infraction of going through the red light and thus establish the identity of the offender.

But he said he could not agree that by claiming his right to remain silent Moore "was guilty of the further and much more serious offence of obstructing the constable in the performance of his duties by refusing to divulge his name and address."

GOING ALL THE WAY, CROWS STEPHENS

B.C. Progressive Conservative leader Vic Stephens sees the party's sweep of 10 of 15 federal byelections Tuesday as a national swing to the Tories that will make them the people's choice in the next provincial election.

"There's a strong Conservative trend right across Canada," he said.

And NDP house leader Bill King said the election of an New Democratic MP in Newfoundland is a long-awaited breakthrough for his party on the east coast.

The NDP picked up one of the five seats the Tories failed to win, taking it from the Conservatives.

King also said Stephens shouldn't be made too overconfident by the strong showing of the Tories.

The NDP spokesman said byelections are a time when even the party faithful feel safe in giving their party a message when there is no chance of it going down to defeat altogether.

In B.C. in 1968, King said the governing Socreds lost all five provincial byelections but the following year were returned to power by a landslide.

But Stephens says a fiscally responsible Conservative party is at its strongest in 30 years.

He said provincial party workers fresh from the annual Conservative convention in Vancouver last week are inspired by Monday's results

Doing the Expected In Burnaby-Delta

SIDDON

Siddon, an engineer, led from the moment the polls closed, and with eight of 419 polls to be counted today, had 29,633 votes.

Siddon, who took slightly more than 63 per cent of the vote Monday, had a plurality of more than 18,000 over Marcia Stickney, 45, of the New Democratic Party.

Ernie LeCours, 67, a former Social Credit member of the legislature, got 1,122, while Homer Stevens, 54, was last again with 391 for the Communist Party.

This time, the Liberals appeared to write the riding off — it was one of only three constituencies in which Trudeau did not campaign.

Save the Marmot!

Wildlife Branch Imposes Shooting Ban, Backs Drive By Naturalists

Friendly Little Whistler Nearly Extinct on Island

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

POSTERS will be distributed throughout Vancouver Island next month alerting the public that the Vancouver Island marmot — a friendly little whistling sub-alpine animal — is close to extinction.

A crash program to save the animal has been launched by Vancouver Island naturalist clubs after David Routledge of Nanaimo reported counting only 20 marmots in four known colonies on the island.

Three years ago the count was 50.

The sites of marmot colonies are not disclosed to protect them from indiscriminate hunters.

A B.C. Wildlife Branch official said it has imposed a ban on shooting marmots and plans to co-operate with naturalists to save them from extinction.

"We have never made a study of the animals because of the lack of funds," the official said.

The plight of the dwindling marmots was revealed by Routledge at a regional meeting of the Federation of B.C. Naturalists.

"I may have missed some on my count and there may be just a few more but I visited the site of one colony and found no evidence at all that they still exist there."

The island marmot once existed from Jordan River north to Forbidden Plateau, but hunting and logging practices have brought the animal to near extinction.

"It is now as rare as the whooping crane," says Betty McKinnon of the Cowichan Valley Natural History Society.

She said a ski development at Mount Washington near Campbell River threatened one colony.

"What is deplorable is that nothing is done in this province to save endangered species," McKinnon said.

She noted that when a species is endangered in the United States, remedial steps are taken immediately.

"They think nothing of setting aside 300 acres or more of forest land to save a bird species," she said.

ANOTHER common name for members of the marmot family is woodchuck. The groundhog is also a member of the marmot family.

He'll be missed if he disappears from the island.

No longer will parents be able to tell their children that it will be an early spring if the bushy tail marmot — or the groundhog as the more popular version has it — sees his shadow when he emerges from his burrow in March.

Good Ship Serenity Fit To Be Tied

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Victoria Mayor Mike Young took his council on a hush-hush trip to nowhere Monday.

Aboard the near-deserted vessel the mayor's crew was at work though, charting a secret course towards calmer seas.

Council sailed ahead throughout the morning before taking a two-hour shore leave to catch some lunch at the nearby Captain's Palace restaurant — the bill being picked up by Victoria taxpayers.

The meeting (the press was barred) was designed to encourage aldermen to hash out all the differences of opinion that usually come to light during debate at the committee stage.

Young denied aldermen were being told not to rock the boat in public. The nautical lesson he apparently wanted to teach was that you don't get anywhere by rowing in opposite directions.

There could be some debate over whether it was salesmanship or seamanship that was being worked at, but aldermen seemed pleased with their shipboard affair.

Ald. John Hayes said it was a worthwhile exercise, a chance for aldermen to speak off the record and off the cuff — to really let their hair down.

But to reporters, who already have extremely limited access to information at city hall, there was concern that the meeting was really just a technique for aldermen to reach agreements on controversial issues before they came up for public scrutiny.

Young assured the press that nothing so anti-democratic was taking place.

Briefly interviewed as he returned to the ship from his free lunch, Young said the informal get-together was designed to allow council members to "air their views on a wide range of matters."

What matters?

Help Plea In Hunt For Knife

The 18-year-old Victoria girl's nude body was found in a wooded lot behind the Cedar Hill Community Centre Saturday evening.

Sunday afternoon 21-year-old Sidney Blair Rhodes, 1629 Burton, was arrested and charged with first degree murder.

Police have been unable to locate the murder weapon. An intensive search by armed forces personnel and police detectives has failed to turn up the knife.

Police feel an innocent passerby may have picked up the weapon sometime over the weekend. Police have appealed to the public to assist in the search.

Anyone having any information that may be connected with the crime is urged to call detectives at the Saanich police station.

MINNIE MOUNTAIN DILEMMA

Who Will Go to Court?

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A court ruling is the only satisfactory way to resolve the conflict of interest controversy involving the Minnie Mountain development at Ten Mile Point, Saanich council was told Monday night.

Although generally agreed on this point, council appeared uncertain as to which of two routes — council or community initiative — should be followed in obtaining a legal judgment.

Mayor Mel Couvelier strongly recommended the latter.

He said council should abandon the attempt to obtain any further legal opinions on the issue and proceed with the last stage of the approval process for the development.

At its regular meeting next week council should give fourth and final reading to the bylaw authorizing a land-use contract with Broadmead Farms Ltd., developers of the proposed Minnie Mountain residential project.

That would be a tangible, positive action which could then be challenged in the courts by any individual or group of citizens wishing to do so, the mayor said.

"It can't be handled any other way," he added.

"The opponents of the proposal will have something to shoot at and the courts will have some basis on which they can consider this."

Couvelier said any further vacillation would be a "gross injustice" to Ald. David Paterson, the target of the conflict of interest allegations.

But Ald. John Mika, who first raised the charges at last month's public hearing, suggested another form of legal action in which council could take the initiative rather than wait to see what challenge transpires.

He suggested the possibility of obtaining a ruling on a "stated case basis." He explained that this is a simplified procedure in which the facts are agreed by the parties concerned, no evidence is called "and the judge simply applies the law to those stated facts."

After some further discussion council instructed staff to ascertain the technicalities involved in Mika's suggestion, and report on the matter at next Monday's council meeting.

At that time the Minnie Mountain land-use contract bylaw will probably be presented for final adoption.

Following the Sept. 27 public hearing, council initially approved the Broadmead Farms proposal on a 5-4 vote, with Paterson voting in favor.

The central point raised by Mika is whether his council colleague should have been disqualified from voting because Paterson works for a company supplying management services to Pearlman and Lindholm (the municipality's solicitors) which in turn has acted for the developers and associated companies.

Council had hoped to obtain answers to this and related questions, including the position of Pearlman and Lindholm, by approaching the Law Society of B.C.

But society president Mary Southin replied Monday that the society does not recommend lawyers, and — concerning the questions about Paterson — cannot give "gratuitous opinions on such political matters."

Meanwhile, the municipal solicitors have repeated an earlier assurance that there was no conflict of interest involving Paterson, and the Cadboro Bay Residents Association has been advised to the contrary.

ALDERMEN BACK MAJOR REPAIR JOB

Bridge Cracked, Corroded

The Johnson Street Bridge is falling down and it will cost about $1.4 million to repair it, city engineer John Sansom told Victoria council's public works committee today.

Sansom said structural members are badly corroded and he showed slides revealing huge cracks in the concrete piers, and steel beams which were rusted in half in some places.

Sansom proposed $800,000 be spent immediately to undertake the most urgent repairs.

Aldermen recommended the work go ahead and will try and work out a cost-sharing formula with the provincial government.

Asked if the 56-year-old bridge is safe, Sansom replied: "Yes. Well, that is it's not going to fall down tomorrow."

A study of the bridge undertaken by Graeme and Murray Consultants showed that it would cost $710,000 to repair the railway bridge and $164,000 to repair the highway section of the bridge.

In addition, $152,000 is needed for work on the substructure and $374,000 for cleaning and painting — a total of $1.4 million.

Sansom said some of the worst damage was underwater on the west pier where divers found gaping holes, one measuring eight feet by three feet which was big enough for divers to get inside.

The Grand Piano Pickle

Victoria's chronic lack of decent concert hall facilities has been a sore point for years, but surely it's going to extremes to underline the point by making one of the world's greatest singers a whipping boy.

When Luciano Pavarotti visited the city recently with his celebrated assisting pianist John Wustman, Victoria tenor Art Wiebe was so shocked at the appalling condition of the Royal Theatre and especially its small grand piano that he cajoled a local firm into loaning without charge its nine-foot Steinway for the occasion. He first got the consent of Vancouver concert agent Julia Switzer.

Negotiations took Art most of the afternoon of the concert day but with the truck ready to load the Steinway, Switzer suddenly nixed the deal.

Her reason: Leave things as they are and let everyone see just how rotten conditions are in this city!

It was probably meant as a light-hearted joke, but it turned out to be a bit of a cruel hoax with bigoted undertones.

The Times' want ads recently carried an employment item saying Tally-Ho was looking for a driver, specifying a non-drinker, experience with horses not necessary and Polish "descendance" an asset.

Applicants were told to call a Mr. Kelly at a certain number.

And Kelly was not amused.

The part that hurts the most, he said, was having to tell the 100 to 150 unemployed callers who thought they had found a good job prospect, that the ad was a hoax.

Kelly has no idea who placed the ad, but he said he would like to apologize to any Polish person who might have been offended.

"I'm of Ukrainian descent, so I know all those jokes," he said.

The root of the joke was probably the tally-ho type wagon the motel has placed in its beer parlor as part of the recent renovations.

A bartender inadvertently slipped some denatured alcohol into Bloody Caesars ordered by the customers. The bartender was left scratching his head while the patrons spent the night in hospital.

No serious damage was done, and proprietor Hans Denne says the two are both good customers and have already been back.

The alcohol was kept in a bottle which the bartender mistook for vodka, one of the main ingredients of a Caesar. It is used for lamp fuel.

The LT News — that's the official newspaper for all the people who work on the buses and the tube in London — recently had an item about Victoria's sightseeing double-decker bus service.

One Arthur Redway, who'd been here on holiday, supplied the paper with a picture of an RT, the model name of the double-deckers, outside The Empress and mentioned that the old buses, which once were used in London, are popular with Japanese and American tourists.

Nice little plug, Arthur, nice little plug.

The twit put a headline on it saying 'See Vancouver — By RT'

Yet Another 30 Days in Tank for Frank

Frank Peter Ellis, no fixed address, is the undisputed leader in court appearances here in the last 20 years. He pleaded guilty — again — to causing a disturbance in the 700-block Douglas — again — on Saturday afternoon.

"What is there about the bus depot that's so attractive to you?" the judge asked the 60 year-old man.

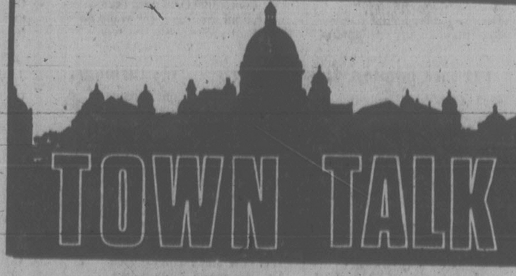
Ellis' last conviction for the same offence came Aug. 24, 1978, when he was given a one-month jail term.

"Were you trying to get to Vancouver again?" Ostler asked.

"You and I have grown old together," Ostler said, handing out another 30-day sentence.



Ottawa should announce its tax rules in advance and not make them up as they go along, says Lynne Munro, who faces an unexpected tax bill of $400 for accepting a travel ticket worth $1,200.

She was a tour guide for three weeks in Europe.

"It was really hard work. I enjoyed it and everything but I wouldn't have done it if I knew it was taxable. I didn't get paid anything, just my expenses."

She spent all three weeks on a bus.

"I knew when we were in Belgium because it was Tuesday. Anyway, they should tell people in advance if things like this are going to become taxable."

The future looks good for teachers graduating from B.C. universities in the next couple of years, provided they forsake metropolitan life for a while.

But jobless teachers who won't leave Greater Victoria and the Lower Mainland are going to have a tough time finding work.

The education ministry's annual report on teacher demand and supply says most of the new positions will be in northern B.C. and the Interior.

The Real Game Is in The Upper Deck

By Bob Ward

NEW YORK (CP) — Television can show baseball from half a dozen angles, with slow motion and instant replays, but to catch the true flavor of the game you have to be in the stands. Especially during the World Series in Yankee Stadium.

Tickets to the game are always in short supply, so when a friend offered a seat at the fifth game of the Yankees-Los Angeles Dodgers championship series, I snapped it up for the $12 cost. Scalpers were offering some tickets at $85 each.

As it turned out, up was the right word. The upper deck in deep left-centre field is about as far from home plate as you can get without leaving the stadium entirely.

"But you can almost reach out and touch the subway," one wag offered.

From the upper deck, the players seem impossibly small and when someone gets a hit, he's halfway to first base before the distant crack of the bat drifts up.

"Not unless he's using a cannon," a veteran upper decker replied.

But the upper deck has its compensations. The fans are probably the most zealous since Walter O'Malley moved the Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles and they tore down Ebbet's Field.

Baseball is serious business up here. Score cards are neatly filled out with much nodding of heads and careful study. Strategy is mapped out before each key play. A failure by the Yankee manager to call for the hit-and-run play when such a move is obvious to the upper deck provokes sharp and often obscene comment.

Between innings, there is much weighty discussion of who is hitting and who isn't, along with caustic commentary on pitching, fielding and the obvious shortcomings of the visiting team.

The cheering may come as a surprise to the newcomer. What at first sounds like a startling chorus of "Boooooo" directed at a Yankee batter turns out to be a joyful "Loooooo", a tribute to outfielder Lou Piniella.

There is also the rythmic chant of "Reg-gie, Reggie" whenever designated hitter Reggie Jackson approaches the plate.

The upper deck set are also masters of the snide comment.

After Dodgers shortstop Bill Ruqsell was charged with an error on one hard grounder and then had trouble with a couple of others, there were several vocal suggestions that the Yankees should vote him a half share of their prize money.

The Los Angeles infield had a lot of trouble putting double plays together, prompting one New York sage to suggest that they should start the next game with a pitcher and eight designated fielders.

The darts are not all reserved for the visitors, however. After Piniella hauled down a long fly to right field and then heaved a lacklustre throw back to the infield, a shout went up "Get a little Ben-Gay for the old hook, Lou."

A suggestion that Yankee pitcher Jim Beattie had a good game in the lop-sided 12-2 victory drew a sardonic rejoinder: "Sure, he fashioned a nifty nine-hitter."

Yankee fans, though, were not out for a demonstration of baseball skill. They just wanted to see their beloved team win—by as large a margin as possible. Even in the late innings, with the visitors trailing hopelessly, every Yankee hit drew thunderous applause.

There were, however, a few disgruntled fans, shivering in the cold wind, who suggested as the evening wore on that the last few Yankees batters might hurry up and strike out so everyone could go home.

Tonight, the series resumes in Los Angeles.

Don Sutton, the veteran right-hander who drew the starting assignment for the Dodgers says there's no black gloom over the National League champions.

"We haven't made the funeral arrangements yet," said Sutton after his club returned from New York where the Yankees swept three games and now lead the World Series three games to two.

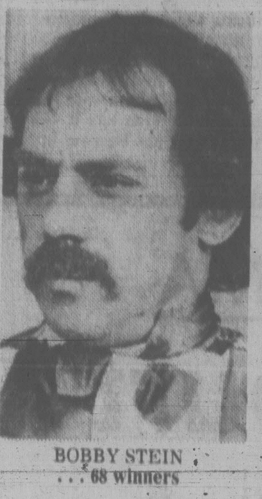
"It may end with this game or it might not end with this game, but all of us are in a position where a lot of other people would like to be," Sutton said.

Asked how he would describe the Dodger infielders who have been criticized during this Series, Sutton answered, "Very carefully. These guys got me 21 wins in 1976 and into the World Series three of the past five years. I think you will forget what happened in New York after we play here."

Sutton, 33, was 15-11 during the regular National League season.

Jim Catfish Hunter, 12-6, is scheduled to pitch for the Yankees. The game will be televised on channels 2, 5 and 6 starting at 5 p.m.

Racing Outlook Appears Bright



BOBBY STEIN . . . 68 winners

Sandown opens its fourth season of thoroughbred racing under the auspices of the Capital City Turf Club on Wednesday, the first mid-week start in that brief span.

Director of racing Aubrey Davies, who has held that position in the previous three years, and was racing secretary at Exhibition Park this season, is optimistic that the 17-day meeting will be a success.

"For one thing we have more applications for stall space than before," he said, and I would estimate that we will have about 325 horses to draw from." Last year there were about 275 horses stabled at Sandown.

Horses are here — or will be coming — from Lethbridge, Yakima, Spokane and Seattle in the next few days while some are expected from Regina.

Davies said he planned eight races for opening day with the feature a $5,000 claimer over one mile which has drawn a field of six.

It is planned to have nine races on Friday and Saturday with Saturday's feature being the Colonist Handicap over one mile and 70 yards.

There will be a minimum of eight races each day with the possibility of nine if entries are available. "We will provide all the races we can," he said.

Davies said the track is in good shape after being resurfaced following the summer meeting of the standardbreds and may be faster than in other seasons.

The jockey colony is as strong, if not stronger than it has ever been, which such accomplished hardboots as Bobby Stein, who had 68 winners at Exhibition Park this year; Floyd Tompkins, who had 49 wins on the prairies; Mark Walker, Randy Dailey, Trevor Wilkinson, Jodey Loseth, younger brother of Chris; Robert Bray, Fred Creighton, Gary Demorest, Memo Mena and Don Frazier, among those scheduled to ride opening day.

Jockey Andy Smith, who was originally scheduled to come here, hurt his back recently and missed the end of the Ex-Park season. He may come later.

Scotty Hughes will be the Association steward while commission stewards will be Don Dunn and Joe Horton.

Doug Reid will call the races for his second year, Charlie Ulrich will be film analyst, Tom Acquiline, clerk of the scales; Spec Simpson, identifier and paddock judge; and Brent Peters, assistant to the director of racing.

Parade to the post will be 1 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and 12:30 p.m. on Saturdays and holidays.

There will be exactor wagering as well as win, place and show betting, on every race, which is a change from previous seasons. This is a pattern that was established and proved successful at the summer harness meeting.

There will be a special bus service by Pacific Coach Lines each racing day, leaving the Victoria terminal at 11:30 a.m. and returning at approximately 5 p.m.

SORRY OLD PAL, might be words Denver Bronco quarterback Craig Morton (7) is using to console former-clubmate Golden Richards after Denver scored 16-7 National Football League victory over Chicago Bears Monday night in Denver. Richards and Morton formerly played together with Dallas Cowboys.

Fake Play Pays Off

DENVER (AP) — Chicago Bears seemingly suffered a failure to communicate on a Denver Broncos fake field-goal play early in the fourth quarter of their National Football League game Monday night.

And the Broncos, inspired by the success of the gamble, went on to defeat the Bears 16-7 in a National Football League game.

"We were looking for the fake all the way," said Chicago coach Neill Armstrong. "We just blew the outside containment."

But Bears safety Gary Fencik said: "It was my understanding we were looking to block. I had no idea it was a fake."

In the confusion, holder Steve Foley ran 14 yards for a first down — setting up a touchdown run by Jon Keyworth. Later, Otis Armstrong caught a Craig Morton pass for another score and the Broncos patented fourth-quarter rally was complete.

"I called it (the fake) before the time out," said Denver coach Red Miller, referring to a Chicago time out called after the Broncos had lined up for the kick. "I thought they recognized it, but then I said, 'Let's go with it anyway.'"

"I heard them call time out. Jim Turner said, 'Don't look at the sidelines.' I figured they knew it and Jim thought they saw it, too," said Foley.

Bears running back Roland Harper had given Chicago the lead with a touchdown at 11:05 of the third quarter. Quarterback Bob Avellini, facing a blitz, dumped a short pass to Harper at the Denver 36-yard line. The fullback bulled his way into the end zone, breaking at least four tackles in completing the 33-yard scoring play.

Veteran Denver quarterback Craig Morton, who replaced injured starter Craig Penrose late in the first half, got the Broncos moving in the closing stages of the third quarter with passes of 21 and 15 yards to wide receiver Rick Upchurch.

SOMETHING NEW FOR THE CZECHS

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia got its first taste of sports vandalism when about 200 youngsters marched through city streets last weekend following a hockey game, smashing windows, damaging autos, phone booths and traffic signs, the daily newspaper Svoboda reported today.

Svoboda said the vandals retreated as soon as the police appeared with its vans and sirens. But it also expressed consternation that when the dozens of detained were questioned, the police found practically all were of the 15-18 age group.

In Czechoslovakia, like in other countries, supporters of soccer or hockey clubs often march through streets following a game, singing and celebrating. But no instances of major vandalism were reported in the past.

The hockey contest was between Sparta Prague and Vzkg Ostrava. Sparta lost 3-6.

City Council Censures Cal

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The city council of Bloomington, where Minnesota Twins have their offices and play their home baseball games at Metropolitan Stadium, voted unanimously Monday night to censure Twins president Calvin Griffith.

The action was taken in response to statements Griffith made several weeks ago at a Lions Club meeting in Waseca, Minn. Among other things, Griffith said he moved his American League franchise from Washington, D.C., "when I found out you only had 15,000 blacks here." He also said ballplayers should take advantage of free love rather than get married and have their baseball performances suffer.

The council resolution asked baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn to investigate Griffith's fitness to own the Twins. It also assured Bloomington's 80,000 residents that neither tax money nor staff time would be expended on behalf of the Twins until the club "gives evidence of a changed policy in regard to race, sex and marital status."

Women's Champ

Race Track 'Stupendous'

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The spanking new racecourse at Shatin has won acclaim from Hong Kong with a newspaper headline summing up everyones reaction: In One Word — Stupendous.

The world's latest racecourse, an engineering marvel built on 16 million tons of reclaimed land, is open and catering to Hong Kong's fervent gamblers.

Some first-day bettors complained about chaotic catering and lukewarm beer in the eight-storey stands, but the Hong Kong Standard newspaper readily agreed "the Shatin experience is here to stay and we have no doubt it will soon become the asian racing mecca it was designed to be."

Racecourse manager Tim Thompson was particularly pleased by the way Hong Kong horses handled the galloping track with its sweeping bends and challenging straight. The jockeys also gave it full marks.

"It was delighted by the enthusiasm of everyody, particularly visiting international experts like Bryan Jenks of the British Jockey Club and David Sieff, chairman of the Race Horse Owners Association there," Thompson said.

The South China Morning Post called it "a sensationally successful opening," and noted that Saturday was a particularly propitious day in the Chinese almanac for "moving into places." Shatin also opened in the Chinese calendar's Year of the Horse.

Bruce Finally Does It On His Fifth Attempt

Among the new club champions in the district, no one is more deserving than Bruce Pelmore. He's Royal Colwood's winner, and a deserving one because of perseverance.

Pelmore's 4 and 3 victory over Ron Howard, Jr., in Sunday's 36-hole playoff marked Pelmore's fifth straight appearance in the final but his first success. Lawrie Kerr, Joe Evans, Ron Howard, Sr., and Art Carey all beat Bruce in previous finals.

Pelmore played well to beat young Howard. He carded an approximate three-over 73 in the morning and was one over for the 15 holes in the afternoon.

Also claiming club crowns were Dave Donaldson, at Gorge Vale; Doug Munro, at Victoria, and Phil Scott, at Glen Meadows. Lanny Sawchuck took Uplands' title three weeks ago while Fred Worthington and Kurt Lampert will play off for the Cedar Hill championship next weekend.

Donaldson turned on the after-burners in the first nine in the afternoon and burned Grant Milliken 8 and 7 in the Gorge final. Three up after 18, Donaldson played the 19-27 holes in three-under figures and was four under for the 29 holes played.

Munro defeated Stu Bland 4 and 3 in the Oak Bay final. A former winner, Munro took charge by grabbing a five-up lead in the morning.

The Scott-Mike Foreman playoff a Glen Meadows was a good one. Scott, a former Saskatchewan junior champion, was one up after 18 and finished with a 3 and 1 margin of victory.

Nothing like watching delivery of your first born to bring out the best in you.

Gorge Vale's Rob Steffanick and Uplands partner Bill Shvetz were beaten on the 18th by pros Bill Penny and Laurie Carroll in Saturday's foursomes in the Winspear Trophy competition at Glen Meadows. Not too long after the match, Rob had to rush his wife to hospital for the birth of a son.

Up all night, Rob went out to beat Penny, one up, in Sunday's singles. It was one of the reasons the amateurs pulled off a 8-7 victory in the sixth annual Island Cup matches.

The amateurs now lead the series with three victories and a tie in six matches. The pros have won twice.

WILSON, CHARUK, BRITTS OTHER LIONS PICKED

Key Gets Two Schenley Nominations

Times News Services

Larry Key of the B.C. Lions is a two-way nominee in the first round of the annual Schenley awards nominations in the Canadian Football League.

Key was nominated as the Lions outstanding player and rookie of the year, the latter honor being won by teammate Leon Bright last season.

Other members of the Lions nominated include centre Al Wilson, who was named outstanding lineman offensive lineman last year, and is up for that award again, receiver Al Charuk as top Canadian and middle linebacker Sam Britts as top defensive player.

Running back James Sykes of Calgary Stampeders was selected his club's contender as most outstanding player and rookie of the year, while wide receiver Joe Poplawski got the nod among Winnipeg Blue Bombers as leading Canadian and best rookie.

Ralph Brock of Winnipeg and Tom Wilkinson of Edmonton, the 1974 winner, were the only quarterbacks nominated for most outstanding player, joining Sykes, Key and running back Mike Strickland of Saskatchewan Roughriders as candidates for the final Western nomination in that category.

Besides Poplawski and Fennell, other Western picks as top Canadian were placekicker Bob Macoritti of Saskatchewan and linebacker-running back John Palazeti of Calgary.

Offensive lineman candidates are guard Bill Stevenson of Edmonton, tackle Lloyd Fairbanks of Calgary, tackle Joe Miller of Saskatchewan and tackle Butch Norman of Winnipeg.

Joining Fennell in the running for defensive honors are tackle John Helton of Calgary who won the award in 1972 and 1974, linebacker Cleveland Vann of Saskatchewan and tackle Vince Phason of Winnipeg.

Second-round voting by 96 sportswriters and broadcasters throughout the league, with results to be announced Oct. 31, will reduce the contenders to 10—one in each category from each conference.

The most outstanding player receives a bond in the amount of $3,000 while the runner-up gets $1,000. Winners of the best Canadian, offensive lineman and defensive player categories receive $2,000 and the runners-up $500. The top rookie gets $1,500 and the runner-up $500.

Defensive end Jim Corrigall was selected from Toronto Argonauts in three of the five categories.

Corrigall was named the Eastern Conference club's candidate as most outstanding player, Canadian player of the year and defensive player of the year. He won defensive honors in 1975.

The only Toronto nominations to elude him were offensive lineman of the year, where tackle Nick Bastaja is the team's nominee, and rookie of the year, where wide receiver Dwight Edwards is the Toronto pick.

Tight end Tony Gabriel of Ottawa Rough Riders, three-times Canadian player of the year, was nominated in two categories, most outstanding player and best Canadian.

Defensive back Randy Rhino of Montreal Alouettes and linebacker Ray Nettles of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, the 1973 winner as best defensive player, were other Eastern players nominated in two categories. Both earned nomination as most outstanding player and best defensive player.

Joining Gabriel and Corrigall in the race for top Canadian honors in the East are quarterback Gerry Dattilio of Montreal and fullback Neil Lumsden of Hamilton.

Tackle Dan Yochum of Montreal, winner of the offensive lineman award in 1976, has been nominated again this year and faces competition from tackle Jim Coode of Ottawa, guard Larry Butler of Hamilton and Toronto tackle Bastaja.

Ottawa's defensive nominee is halfback Ken Downing, while placekicker J. T. Hay is the team's rookie candidate. Other top rookies are linebacker Jerry Friesen of Montreal, Hamilton linebacker Ben Zambiasi and Toronto's Edwards.

WHL Doubles Team Fine

CALGARY (CP) — The board of governors of the Western Hockey League ruled Monday night to double the current $250-fine against the first team involved in a bench-clearing brawl.

At a league meeting, the board also ruled to reduce to $10 from $25 a fine against each player of the first team involved in a brawl. The new rate is 10 per cent of the penalty imposed in the National Hockey League.

The first player to leave the bench in a brawl will, in addition to the $10-fine, receive a five-game suspension.

The board also decided that only the first team involved in a brawl will receive automatic fines and that officials will have the option of fining the second team. The old rule automatically penalized both clubs.

The board ruled that the president of the WHL, who is currently Ed Chynoweth, has the option to increase penalties in individual cases.f

The governors decided to retain a rule introduced this year allowing a team to call time out for 30 seconds during the last two minutes of a game.

In other business, it was announced that Brian Shaw, currently general manager of Portland Winterhawks, has been appointed coach of the team.

Del Wilson, vice-president and part owner of Regina Pats, will take over duties as general manager of the club.

Edwards Making A Late Run

TORONTO (CP) — Jimmy Edwards isn't likely to retain the Canadian Football League rushing title this year, but his late-season rally could still put him close to the 1,000-yard mark.

Edwards, who rushed for 1,581 yards last year and won the most valuable player award missed three games for Hamilton Tiger-Cats at the start of the 1978 season.

In his last four games, however, Edwards has run for 79, 96, 101 and 103 yards and CFL statistics released this week show him with a season total of 652. He needs an average of 116 a game in his last three games to hit 1,000.

Mike Strickland of Saskatchewan Roughriders has already reached the 1,000-yard plateau and is in good position to take the rushing title this year. He now has 1,176 yards on 250 carries this season.

Others closing in on 1,000 are Larry Key of British Columbia Lions with 174 carries for 856 yards, Jim Germany of Edmonton Eskimos with 166 for 841 and Jim Sykes of Calgary Stampeders with 162 for 808 yards.

Tony Gabriel of Ottawa Rough Riders has extended his league record pass-catching streak to 88 consecutive games with at least one reception a game.

Gabriel leads the Eastern Conference receivers with 53 catches for 889 yards. Joe Poploawski of Winnipeg Blue Bombers continues to lead the league with 63 receptions for 845 yards.

Big Daddy Wins 21st

Garlits, who lives in Seffner, Fla., notched a 233.10 m.p.h. run at the Atlanta International Dragway to beat Clayton Harris of Moulton, Ala.

CANADA ZAPS ZAMBIA

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Canada and the United States kept their undefeated status after four games in the fourth world women's softball championship.

The Canadians whipped Zambia 39-0 on Monday while the Americans defeated Belize 6-1.

The week-long tournament, in which 14 teams participate, is divided into two groups, with the best four teams of each group, after a round-robin elimination, going into the semi-finals.

The United States and Canada lead their respective groups with 4-0 records.

Gulls Kill Braves Streak

Juan de Fuca Gulls upset Saanich Braves with a vengeance Monday, toppling the previously-unbeaten league leaders 10-2 in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Defenceman Ron Schmidt fired four goals to lead the Juan de Fuca attack, Mike Milligan added three and singles were contributed by Mike Adamek, Terry Coughlin and Randy Williams.

Bucks Trip Merchants

Western Homes Buckaroos scored two unanswered goals in the third period Monday to trip Juan de Fuca Merchants 5-3 in a South Island Big Six Intermediate Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

Stan Alstad fired three goals to set the pace for Bucks, who lead the league with a 4-0-1 record, while singles were added by Dave Pettinger and Norm Allen.

Cam Kring, Don Hansen and Randy Kerr replied for Merchants.

Olympic Reform Bill in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will soon receive legislation designed to reorganize of the U.S. Olympic Committee and reform amateur athletics in this country.

The White House has indicated that Carter will sign the bill and another containing $16 million to implement the reorganization, both passed Sunday as Congress rushed to adjourn.

Real Madrid Left In Favored Spot

By Reuter

Nearly all Europe's most famous soccer clubs will be on the sidelines Wednesday when the second round of the European Cup gets under way.

Following a series of first-round shocks, Real Madrid is the only club in the last 16 that has ever won the competition or even reached the final.

Now Real, Dutch team PSV Eindhoven and Nottingham Forest of England look the most likely candidates to take over the title of European club champion after the final on May 30 next year.

The Spanish champion, which won the European Cup for the first five years of its existence from 1956 to 1960, is at home to Swiss champion Grasshoppers Zurich in this week's first leg.

Both clubs had easy opening-round matches, scoring 25 goals between them on aggregate but Real should have the advantage. Real reports no injuries and, on the weekend, went to the top of the Spanish league with a 2-1 win over rival Athletic Bilbao.

Ferenc Puskas, the Hungarian hero of Real's all-conquering team of the 50s, now manages AEK Athens which takes on Nottingham Forest, surprise conqueror of English rival Liverpool.

Eindhoven, with four Dutch World Cup stars, including the brilliant youngster Ernie Brandts, faces a difficult trip to Glasgow to play Scottish champion Rangers, whose magnificent first round win over Juventus of Italy contrasted with recent ragged league form.

No east European club has ever won the Cup but Dynamo Dresden of East Germany should have little trouble beating Irish champion Bohemians, who have to play Wednesday's first leg in Dundalk, 50 miles from their Dublin home because of past crowd trouble.

And there is an intriguing clash between two formidable teams, Zborjovka Brno of Czechoslovakia and Poland's Wisla Krakow.

The other second-round ties pit Dinamo Kiev of the Soviet union against Malmoe of Sweden, Austria Wien against Lillestroem of Norway and Lokomotiv Sofia from Bulgaria against West German champion Cologne.

The supporting competitions, the European Cup Winners' Cup and European Football Union (UEFA) Cup, also start their second rounds on Wednesday.

The second-leg matches in all three competitions will be played on Nov. 1.

Uyend Leads Pin Marathon

Uyend put together a 1,984 total with a handicap of 264 for a 2,248 total to defeat Tom Tuthill of Victoria by 98 pins. Tuthill had a score of 1,814-336—2,150.

Uyend won $623, Tuthill $311.50 and third-place Mark Devito of Burnaby, 1,697-448—2,145, $100.

NHL Rule Stays

NEW YORK (CP) — The National Hockey League board of governors defeated in a conference call hookup Monday a motion to amend league bylaws regarding players claimed in the annual waiver draft. Had it passed, a spokesman for league president John Ziegler said, it would have allowed a team to trade a player claimed in this year's waiver draft.

AUTO RACING HEAD CRITICISES STARTER

PARIS (AP) — The new head of world auto racing today severely criticized the starting procedure of the Sept. 10 Italian Grand Prix in which Swedish star Ronnie Peterson was fatally injured.

France's Jean-Marie Balestre said Italian officials refused pleas by international officials to replace starter Gianni Restelli after the first "bad start" of the event was followed by the accident. "Then, despite having someone at his elbow, he flunked the restart," Balestre said.

Racing experts have said Restelli started the race too quickly after the warm-up lap, before all the cars were again stationary. That gave cars in the back of the field a rolling start on the leaders and led to dangerous overtaking in the few yards of the race.

Aoki Takes Duel Of 'Understudies'

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Japan's Isao Aoki, having won the World Match Play title, hopes the door now is open for him to play more golf in Europe and the rest of the world.

Aoki beat Simon Owen of New Zealand 3 and 2 in the 15th World Match Play championship on Wentworth's 6,969-yard, par-73 course Monday in a final that some observers unkindly called a "match of the understudies."

In consolation play Monday, Dale Hayes of South Africa defeated Andy Bean of the United State, two and one.

Neither Aoki nor Owen is well known in Europe, although both played impressively in the 1978 British Open, in which Aoki was a first-round leader and Owen was nipped on the final round by Jack Nicklaus.

At Wentworth, they both started as 50-1 shots in the betting. But in the four gruelling 36-hole rounds, spread over five days, Aoki disposed of American Lee Elder, South African Gary Player, the U.S. Masters champion, and American Ray Floyd, while Owen beat U.S. Open champion Andy North, Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, and defending Match Play champion Graham Marsh of Australia.

Both Aoki and Owen steadily worked their way through the field without playing particularly spectacular golf.

In the final, a low-key match, Owen led three-up after the opening four holes, as Aoki bogeyed two holes. But after that, Aoki put his game together—"They're like that in Asia; they don't get upset and they don't get excited. They just keep plugging away," Owen said admiringly.

Owen's putting, sound in earlier rounds, let him down badly this time. Aoki tied the match at the 13th hole, and finished the morning round with an eagle nd a birdie to go two-up.

In the afternoon round, Owen three-putted the first hole, then missed a nine-footer, and had four bogeys while Aoki was going round the front side in par 35 and increasing his lead to five-up. But Owen cut the deficit to three-up at the 16th hole.

"It was a most important win for me," said Aoki while sipping champagne. "Now I hope I'll have the opportunity to go abroad more often and get a lot more competition. I'd like to play a lot more in Europe and the rest of the world next year."

CATHY PREPARES FOR PRO TOUR BID

Sherk, of Port Colborne, Ont., made the announcement Monday night after returning from Fiji where she captured the individual title in the women's world amateur championship.

'I've been thinking about it for a long time and yes, I will turn pro next year," said the 28-year-old golfer who added the world amateur title to an unprecedented string of victories in 1978.

Her other victories included the North-South amateur championship at Pinehurst, N.C., the Ontario women's amateur, the Canadian Amateur and the United States women's Amateur.

In the world tournament Canada finished just one shot behind Australia. Sherk, however, was four strokes ahead of her nearest rivals.

Lead Retained By Claremont

Tony Theriault won the 7,000-metre event in 24 minutes, nine seconds Monday to keep Claremont on top of the boys' division in the Greater Victoria High School Cross-Country League.

Claremont picked up only 26 points under the reverse-scoring system Monday while Victoria (73) and Mt. Douglas (78) are second and third in standings after five weeks.

Tony Starck of Claremont finished second and Terry Bateman of Mt. Doug was third. Bateman continues to lead the individual standings with 117 points, Theriault is second with 85 and Starck third at 74.

In the girls' division, Victoria High won the 3,500-metre race with 54 points while Claremont was second with 71 and Belmont third at 76. Claremont still leads the division and is trailed by Victoria and Belmont, respectively.

Peggy Nelson of Dunsmuir turned in a time of 14:17 to earn the individual victory and padded her leading total to 92 points. Bonnie Hutton, who finished second, is runner-up over-all with 85 and Maeve Lydon of Claremont is third at 79.

Karen Coutts of Belmont was third in Monday's race.

THREE WAYS TO CELEBRATE THE NEW YEAR.

1979 CELICA

This is the car of tomorrow that you can drive, that you can own, today. The advanced aerodynamic styling of Celica guarantees that it is a turning point in automotive design. That design, the wedge perfected makes Celica "slippery" through the air with less drag in its shape. Increased visibility is due to a larger glass area.

There are four models to choose from: GT Liftback and Coupe; ST Liftback and Coupe.

The GT Liftback comes equipped with a 5-speed overdrive all-synchromesh transmission, new full fabric seats, cockpit-type dash with full instrumentation, power front disc brakes, fully reclining front bucket seats, 2.2 litre SOHC engine, AM/FM stereo multiplex system, low profile steel-belted radials, all coil suspension. And much more. All standard.

It is important that you see and drive this remarkable automobile. Your Toyota dealer will gladly arrange this for you.

1979 CANADIAN

The Toyota Canadian is one of Canada's lowest priced import cars. But that doesn't mean it's short on standard features. Available with either a 1.2 litre or 1.6 litre engine, the Canadian offers an electric rear window defroster, heavy duty heater, factory undercoating, wall-to-wall carpeting, 4-speed full synchromesh transmission, MacPherson strut front suspension, power-assisted front disc brakes, front bucket seats and much more, all standard. At no extra charge.

The Toyota Canadian, born out of exhaustive winter testing in Canada's far north. It's tough enough to take on any kind of Canadian driving conditions. And win. And keep on winning year after year.

1979 PICK-UP

The day of the boring truck is gone. Toyota offers 3 stunning new models to prove the point: The SR-5, the Standard Bed, and the Long Bed.

A new, innovative design, precise performance and handling, comfort, greatly enlarged passenger space, heavy duty winter equipment, tough-as-nails construction, extra large cargo area. Toyota Trucks deliver the looks and the payload.

The SR-5 model, with almost everything standard from 5-speed overdrive transmission, wall-to-wall carpeting and bucket seats to radial tires and AM/FM radio is the best bet to change your ideas about truckin.'

1979 RUST PROTECTION

All Toyota automobiles have a new 3 year anti-perforation warranty against corrosion damage. All Toyotas are heavily protected against rust through the increased use of galvanized metal, rocker panel anti-chip paint, seam sealants and plastic front fender liners.

Before the Judge

A 20-year-old in provincial court Monday was given jail terms totalling 2½ months for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and driving while suspended.

Llyn Evan Wood, 1270 Rudlin, was sentenced by Judge Fred Green who said: "The time has come."

Green was referring to Wood's criminal record which included two convictions for assaulting peace officers and one each for obstructing a peace officer, driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and impaired driving, all since June 3, 1976.

Wood was fined $300 and $100, respectively, after being convicted on that date for assaulting and obstructing a peace officer.

On May 31, 1977, he was fined $750 for driving while over .08 and jailed 14 days for assaulting a peace officer.

And on Dec. 7, 1977, he was jailed 20 days for impaired driving.

Wood pleaded guilty to the two driving offences Oct. 2 and was remanded until Monday for a pre-sentence report.

Defence lawyer Allan Trann said his client was willing to attend the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society for counselling and has arranged to pay $100 monthly to the Insurance Corporation of B.C. to pay the $500 damages to the other two vehicles.

Trann said Wood panicked after the accident and fled.

Green imposed a two-month period on the failing to remain and a consecutive 14 days on the driving while suspended conviction.

Green said he would recommend Wood be given work release while serving his sentence.

* * *

Court was told Agar was driving east on Sooke Road on Aug. 17 when he hit a parked car and kept going.

Agar, who said he was handicapped by a stroke two years ago, was also given a suspended sentence for failing to remain at the accident. Ostler placed Agar on one year's probation, prohibited him from driving during that probation period and said he would recommend to the motor-vehicles branch that Agar's driving licence be cancelled.

School Bus Campaign Paying Off

The number of motorists ignoring flashing red school bus lights is decreasing due to media coverage of a campaign by police and school officials on the Saanich Peninsula.

Central Saanich Police Chief Bob Miles said Monday people are becoming aware they must stop while school buses are loading and unloading.

Police have warned and in some cases issued tickets to drivers who fail to stop while buses are loading and unloading students.

A driver who fails to stop and wait for a school bus to discharge or take on passengers is subject to three demerit points. The flashing lights must be observed by oncoming and following traffic.

Secret Interest Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A senior employee of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s (MB) log supply division secretly held a one-third interest in a log sales and brokerage firm dealing with the giant forestry company, B.C. Supreme Court was told Monday.

Dennis Richard Binstead is charged with seven counts of corruptly accepting benefits from Evan Douglas MacKinnon and Charles P. Anderson "as a consideration for forebearing to show disfavor" to their firm.

The charges cover the period from Dec. 20, 1972, to Sept. 30, 1977.

Crown counsel John Rowan said he will call evidence to show that Binstead received benefits from the firm of stocks and about $200,000 — $12,000 of which was paid in gold bars.

Rowan said the Crown contends Binstead was initially given a one-third interest in Anderson and MacKinnon Log Sales Ltd. of Vancouver in 1969 with the proviso that he leave MB.

However, he retained his position with the company.

Rowan said the transaction which made Binstead a partner in the firm was so secret that only the three principals and the firm's accountant knew of it.

MacKinnon testified that his firm bought and sold logs for MacMillan Bloedel as brokers and that the account formed a large part of their business, as it did for MB's log supply division.

He said Binstead asked to join the firm on the condition he resign from MacMillan Bloedel. The accountant then formed a trust arrangement, he said, and Binstead's beneficial interest was shown on tax returns.

The trial continues.

Three-Month Term For Indecent Attack

Three months in jail and 18 months' probation were ordered Monday for 23-year-old Terrance Alexander Brown, found guilty last month of indecent assault of a girl hitch-hiker after a drinking bout March 23.

Judge Leslie Cashman, in Victoria county court, told Brown he would have to abstain from alcohol during the period of probation, seek medical or other counselling for his drinking problem, and make monthly reports to a probation officer.

The time will be served in protective custody at Vancouver Island Regional Correction Centre concurrently with a 20-month sentence already being served for a rape committed Feb. 26, 1976, in Esquimalt. Cashman noted the second offence occurred shortly after Brown was paroled in February, and the parole was then cancelled.

Although it was significant that the assault occurred while Brown was on parole, Cashman noted the accused believed in both instances that he acted with the consent of the complainant, and that he recognizes his drinking problem.

Brown was found guilty by a jury after a two-day trial that saw one juror discharged at the outset because of possible prejudice and a second member excused for illness, leaving only 10 on the panel.

In determining sentence, Cashman took into consideration that Brown has the support of his mother and friends, a job to go to and an interest in Alcoholics Anonymous. The assault was not as serious as the first offence, and Cashman was of the opinion that lengthy jail sentences do not necessarily protect the public.

Recent appeal cases have said early rehabilitation may serve the best interests of the public, the judge noted, finally observing that Brown had spent seven months in jail awaiting trial, much of it (since June) in protective custody because of the nature of the first offence.

"Protective custody is a hard way to serve any term," Cashman said.

"If alcohol is your difficulty, then you're going to have to abstain from it absolutely."

Defence counsel Don Farquhar said those in protective custody at the Wilkinson Road jail are in a segregated wing but are within sight and sound of the general prison population who are abusive, throw things at them, pour water into their cells and spit in their food.

Crown counsel R.A. Mulligan emphasized that circumstances of the offence were similar to those in the previous conviction, in which a girl was picked up in a vehicle late at night after leaving a downtown club. There may be reason to sympathize with Brown's personal life, Mulligan said, but the public must be protected and others on parole have to be aware that their behavior must be irreproachable.

Brown had breached a trust by violating parole, he said.

Future of Parliament The Issue, Blais Says

TORONTO (CP) — Federal Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais, characterizing Parliament as an adversarial contest, said Monday that internal cabinet operations must remain secret in order for the contest to function.

Blais, in a telephone interview from Ottawa with CBC's Barbara Frum, said he not only has the responsibility to administer his department but also to protect democratic institutions and "it so happens that the first and foremost of those institutions is Parliament."

Blais was responding to questions regarding the government's dispute with the McDonald commission investigation of RCMP wrongdoing.

At issue is whether evidence of cabinet ministers and cabinet documents should be produced in public or in closed sessions of the commission.

Blais said pertinent documents had been given to the commission and there would be no change in the government's co-operation with the commission.

However, he said the government has the ultimate responsibility to decide what should be produced in public and such decisions will be based on the interests of national security.

Government Ducks for Cover Over McDonald Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — The government ducked questions Monday about its next moves in a dispute with the McDonald royal commission investigating RCMP wrongdoing.

Prime Minister Trudeau, Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais and Justice Minister Otto Lang refused to say whether the government would go to court to prevent cabinet ministers testifying before the commission in public. Such questions were hypothetical, they said.

Under heavy opposition attack in the Commons, Trudeau gave assurances that the government would co-operate with the commission in every way. But he reiterated earlier statements that the cabinet will have the final say in protecting cabinet secrets and national security.

At issue is whether evidence of cabinet ministers and cabinet documents will be produced in public or in closed sessions before the commission.

The commission, headed by Alberta Judge David McDonald, decided Friday it alone will decide which written and oral evidence from cabinet ministers will be heard in public.

Government lawyers had argued that all cabinet documents have to be handled in closed sessions when high-ranking RCMP officers and senior cabinet ministers begin appearing before the commission Oct. 24.

Trudeau said Monday his government has been more than generous in turning over files to the commission.

"We have led them to files, we have shown them things they should know and I think that this is very basic when one is judging whether the government is covering up."

He ducked questions by Opposition Leader Joe Clark as to whether the government was considering limiting the commission's mandate to look at a cabinet ministers' actions.

"We do not see any disputes arising," Trudeau said. "There is no case where the government and the commission have not seen eye to eye on everything that has happened before the commission."

However, he said, "we do have the ultimate responsibility in matters of Privy Council secrets and national security. We will stand by our responsibility."

Trudeau said the government will not hide behind the Official Secrets Act if there is evidence that a cabinet minister committed fraud or any other crime.

RCMP officers have already testified they burned a barn, stole dynamite, broke into a building to steal Parti Quebecois membership lists and a number of other questionable acts.

Mr. Justice McDonald said limiting the examination of cabinet ministers would be unfair to lower-ranking RCMP officers.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader said Trudeau's statement is a clear contradiction from assurances given the Commons by former solicitor-general Francis Fox. That minister had said that the commission, not the government, would determine what would be made public and what would be kept secret.

Lang told Conservative Justice critic Eldon Woolliams (Calgary North) that "co-operation and argument before the commission to this point has resolved all issues and this is how we expect it to continue."

However, Trudeau confused the issue when he said '"the courts would decide."

"That is what I am saying.

"There are some cases where privilege may or may not be invoked and the courts decide if it is right or not."

Trudeau has adopted the Nixonian doctrine that the government will be the final arbiter in disputes involving itself, Broadbent said.

Nixon also invoked executive privilege on the grounds of national security in trying to withhold incriminating tapes.

In the Watergate scandal the courts ruled that public interest outweighed executive privilege.

Trudeau said Crown privilege is a valid concept. "There are some things which are of a nature to be concealed by the state," he said.

It is unclear whether the government can take any dispute which might arise with the commission to court.

Lawyer Joseph Nuss, who represents the government before the commission, said Friday there is no avenue of appeal through the courts. He added, however, that there are "other remedies" open to the government.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark suggested the government might revise the commission's mandate to prohibit it from looking at ministerial involvement in illegal RCMP activities.

Bill Jarvis (PC—Perth-Wilmot) asked whether the government would use the Federal Court Act to shield cabinet documents from public view.

Under this act, the government could withhold documents from the commission by presenting an affidavit saying publicity would be injurious to national security, defence or federal-provincial relations.

Trudeau and Blais dismissed both these suggestions as hypothetical.

Sask. Tax On Potash To Trial

REGINA (CP) — Another challenge to Saskatchewan's resource legislation came to trial Monday, beginning what could be a long journey through the courts.

The case follows a Supreme Court of Canada ruling against the province last November and a follow-up decision two weeks ago requiring Saskatchewan to pay Canadian Oil and Gas and Oil Ltd. interest on taxes collected.

The court also ruled the province's pro-rationing scheme on potash was unconstitutional.

This time five companies are testing the province's potash reserve tax in Court of Queen's Bench.

JUDGE BREAKS GANG'S 'SPELL'

TORONTO (CP) — A Montreal man described by a county court judge as being under the spell of an evil genius was sentenced Monday to 5½ years in penitentiary for his role in six bank robberies in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

County Court Judge Hugh Locke said he could not understand why John Reilly, 23, took all the risks but received almost none of the money after he joined a gang headed by John Mitchell Wright, 28, of Texas.

Judge Locke described Wright as an evil genius wanted by police for questioning in 13 bank robberies in 1977 and 1978 which netted about $18,000.

Mitchell used the name Rick Arsenault and travelled with Diane Anderson in what Deputy Crown Attorney Robert McGee has referred to as a Bonnie-and-Clyde type gang.

Reilly was described by his father as an easily-influenced man. He joined the gang when he was broke, wrote a series of holdup notes and robbed the banks at gunpoint, testimony showed.

Clothes Tags Not Symbol Enough?

OTTAWA (CP) — People neither use nor understand the color-coded labels introduced by the government in 1970 to help consumers care for their clothes.

Delegates at a consumer services conference workshop said the public needs more education on the meaning of the symbols, used by about 60 per cent of Canadian manufacturers.

"Consumers don't pay attention to the labels and studies show they don't understand them," said Marjorie Wall of Guelph University.

She said a 1975 university study of 300 consumers showed youngsters and those with more formal education knew the symbols better.

Caouette Chews Up Plans For Constitution Over Food

OTTAWA (CP) — Thousands of Canadians cannot afford to eat properly and all the government offers them is a new constitution, Gilles Caouette (SC—Temiscamingue) told the Commons Monday.

"In Quebec, there are many people who can't eat two decent meals a day," the son of former Social Credit leader Real Caouette said during throne speech debate.

The same situation exists in English-speaking Canada, the Quebec MP said, quoting statistics from Health Minister Monique Begin that 600,000 Canadians live below the poverty line.

Economic measures to change this situation were not contained in the throne speech last week opening a new session of Parliament, Caouette said.

Caouette suggested, as have MPs from other Opposition parties, that improvements to the economy rather than the constitution are vital to national unity.

Since the throne speech debate began Thursday, Opposition MPs have emphasized what they consider a lack of initiative by the government to counteract such problems as the sinking dollar, high unemployment and growing inflation.

James Gillies (PC—Don Valley) described Prime Minister Trudeau's economic strategy as reminiscent of "the mad hatter from Alice in Wonderland."

The prime minister offered no hope for Canadians, only confusion. He seemed unaware that 900,000 Canadians were out of work.

Stan Darling (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said Trudeau's economic policies have driven the value of the Canadian dollar down, but the devalued currency has defied economic wisdom by not stimulating growth. Tourism and exports have not increased as much as they should have with the dollar dropping, he said.

Liberal Keith Penner (Thunder Bay) disputed Opposition charges that federal government spending had increased inflation. Spending by municipal and provincial governments had grown faster than federal government expenditures.

He praised Trudeau for his program of economic cuts, but said "restraint will only hurt and not help unless the end result is a stimulus to new growth."

CONFLICT BILL BACK

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal government Monday re-introduced its conflict-of-interest legislation.

The bill was first introduced in the Commons in June, but died when the third session of Parliament ended last week.

The bill would allow MPs and Senators to have business dealings with the government if a House or Senate committee "considers it just and equitable to do so."

In addition, MPs and Senators could own up to $15,000 or five per cent of publicly-traded shares in corporations that do business with the government.

Model-Year Switching Costly: APA

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer advocate Phil Edmonston said Monday that auto manufacturers have defrauded car buyers of millions of dollars in the last 35 years by selling cars as new that had actually been manufactured in the previous model year.

Edmonston, president of the Montreal-based Automobile Protection Association (APA), told a conference on consumer assistance that the manufacturers altered the year on the registration of the vehicles.

The vehicles were then sold as new when the next year's models were introduced in the fall.

Edmonston said about 50,000 purchasers of Ford, Chrysler, Toyota, Datsun, Mazda, British-Leyland, BMW and Renault vehicles had been defrauded of about $15 million over the last 25 years because of the practice.

He said in a later interview that the APA had assisted consumers in legal action against the companies named and the owners had been successful in about 150 cases in courts of Ontario and Quebec. He said owners were awarded damages ranging from $200-$300.

Edmonston, speaking before an audience of consumers and government and industry officials — including representatives of the companies named — produced a Ford Motor Co. of Canada memo to its dealers instructing them how to complete the changeover for some 1972 trucks.

Dated Sept. 19, 1972, the memo said: "Before eligible units may be redesignated as 1973 models for registration purposes, the following actions must be carried out by the dealership:

"The following publications must be removed from the vehicle:

"1. 1972 Model Ford Truck Operator's Manual.

"2. 1972 Model Medium and Heavier (Series 500 and higher) Truck Warranty Facts Booklet.

"3. 1972 Emissions Systems Warranty and Maintenance Schedules booklet."

The memo named various items of 1973 literature with which dealers were to replace the 1972 material.

Danson Denies Boeing Kickbacks

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson says the government has uncovered no evidence of wrongdoing by Canadians in Boeing aircraft sales despite claims of improper dealings.

The minister said in the Commons Monday that "we can't find any evidence, record or indication from Boeing itself of any impropriety involving Canadians."

He was replying to Progressive Conservative defence critic Allan McKinnon (Victoria) who said there is "evidence of impropriety" now.

McKinnon was referring to what he said were Boeing admissions to the U.S. Securities Exchange Commission this summer that it signed "dual agreements" with agents representing five countries includin Canada. The Conservative MP said in an interview this means there was a public agreement signed with agents as well as a private deal.

An RCMP sgokesman said the force has investigated the Boeing kickback issue first raised last year nad has so far found nothing of a criminal nature. He said the investigation should be completed soon.

A defence department spokesman said there is no evidence of wrongdoing in defence department deals to buy five Boeing 707s.

Air Canada President Claude Taylor denied any impropriety in airline purchases of Boeing planes when the furor erupted in 1977.

The Canadian American justice departments reached an agreement 18 months ago to make information on possible Boeing aircraft sales kickbacks available to Canadian authorities.

A spokesman for Justice Minister Otto Lang said he assumes the information was secured from Washington and turned over to the RCMP for its investigation. But an RCMP official refused to say what its inquiry was based on.

McKinnon said he intends to pursue the issue in the Commons, demanding the government get all the information it can from the U.S. justice department and the Securities Exchange Commission.

India has obtained information provided to the commission by Boeing, he said. The Indian government was looking into the kickback issue.

Kidnap Filth Shown

MONTREAL (CP) — Some 200 articles, including nylon stocking face masks, a filthy sleeping bag, a grimy pillow, plastic food containers, empty gin and cola bottles, and lengths of heavy chain were entered as evidence Monday in the trial of the alleged abductors of Charles Marion.

The articles, found in or near the dugout where Marion lived during his 82-day ordeal, were all used by either Marion or his kidnappers.

Claude Valence, 43, and his wife Jeanne, 42, both of Sherbrooke, are facing five charges in the Aug. 6, 1977 abduction of the 58-year-old caisse populaire loans manager.

Quebec provincial police officer Jean-Louis Savard, who was giving his second day of testimony before Superior Court, showed them the snowmobile pants and boots and ski jacket that Marion wore in pictures his abductors sent police as proof he was still alive.

He described, but did not present, three nude photographs of Marion which had been found in the dugout beside a polaroid camera.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

Exclusive Healing Substance Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids.

If you want satisfactory relief from 'Itching Piles'—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance that promptly relieves the burning itch and pain—actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing.

In one case after another 'very striking improvement' was reported and verified. And most important . . . this improvement was maintained over a period of months.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulate growth of new tissue. Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores—satisfaction or money refunded.

WATCH OUT, MANKIND. . .

EDMONTON (CP) — Mankind could become extinct sooner than we think, anthropologist Richard Leakey said Monday.

"There's no reason why we can't fail," Leakey told the first day session of Symposium '78, sponsored by the College of Clinical Social Work of Alberta.

He said the pressures and problems now facing society must be solved now because the breaking point will be catastrophic.

"There's a frightening growth in the number of people. We don't have the resources to support today's technological society. Do we re-organize or do we slow down?"

Leakey said he gives man a 70-per-cent chance of survival.

Early man — two to three million years ago — was not the bloodthirsty animal he's become in modern times.

But Leakey is optimistic about the future and holds out the sharing quality of early man as a carrot for modern man to pursue as hope for the future.

He said he disagrees with other anthropologists, such as Konrad Lorenz, who believe aggression is an inherent part of man.

Convention Bill Dies

WASHINGTON (CP) — A bill that might have released a huge new flow of American tourists to Canada died on the Congress floor and while Canadian officials were saddened, they said the bill was one of mixed blessings.

The legislative move, which collapsed with the termination of the 95th Congress during the weekend, would have granted Canada and Mexico exemptions from U.S. tax regulations which discourage Americans from attending foreign conventions.

The regulations allow only two tax-deductible foreign convention trips a year and place ceilings on daily spendings which Americans can claim for tax purposes.

An amendment to the bill would have tied a Canadian exemption from the tax curbs to Canadian willingness to negotiate changes in its tax regulations affecting U.S. border television stations.

The Canadian regulations do not allow Canadian companies to deduct for tax purposes costs of using U.S. television stations to carry advertisements directed primarily at a Canadian audience.

'Paying Dearly' for Lost Schools

SECTIST PLEADS GUILTY TO FRAUD

VANCOUVER (CP) — A member of the Hare Krishna sect pleaded guilty in court Monday to fraud after money he solicited, supposedly for hospital construction, was given to the religious group.

James Douglas Hayes, 32, a resident of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness (ISKON) temple here, was accused of soliciting three donations totalling $12 and attempting to solicit another.

Court was told a check of hospital records showed no contributions from the group.

In a statement to police given to the court, Hayes said he collected a daily average of $120 and had a $750-a-week quota which he always filled.

He said the 27 Vancouver-based ISKON collectors worked an area from Vancouver Island to Winnipeg. "If we stay in the city, we get too hot. We then move inland."

Judge Randall Wong said more information was required about Hayes before sentencing Nov. 14.

Elementary school closures ordered last spring by Greater Victoria school board are creating serious problems, Trustee Carol Pickup charged at a school board meeting Monday.

They have caused severe overcrowding, destroyed programs and helped boost enrolment at private schools, she claimed.

The closures were ill-timed and will have long-term effects trustees didn't anticipate, she said.

Pickup opposed the decision last May to close Bank Street and Tolmie elementary schools due to declining enrolment.

A large-scale shuffle of students and programs designed to combat the effects of declining enrolment isn't working, she said.

The board decided to move the Bank Street program for handicapped students to Margaret Jenkins and relocate Tolmie students at three schools with extra space: Hampton, Tillicum and Burnside.

But the re-organization is turning out to be a big mess, said Pickup.

"A number of our schools are paying dearly for those closures. I think they were ill-timed."

Bank Street's program has been destroyed by the move to Margaret Jenkins, Pickup said.

And Margaret Jenkins is also in trouble, she said.

Students moved to the schools as a result of the closures are contributing to overcrowding.

Enrolment at Burnside jumped from 192 last year to 222, but the school is designed to hold a maximum 185.

Hampton enrolment rose this fall to 272 from 235 and the school is now over the 264 maximum.

Overcrowding is so serious in most of these schools that good programs have to be cut and others moved into basements and portables, she said.

Meanwhile, other students have been pulled out of the system and enrolled in private schools.

Overcrowding will get worse because young families moving into the areas are causing a mini baby boom. The board failed to take these factors into account when making closure decisions, Pickup charged.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am 17. I have been going out with a guy for three years. He is 21. We are to be married soon. I love him very much although he likes sex a lot, it doesn't turn me on at all. I do it to please him. Is there something wrong with me? I look at a lot of other guys but they don't turn me on either. Please asnwer my letter before it is too late.

Answer: I would suggest that you proceed with your marriage plans cautiously. If there are difficulties in a relationship before marriage it would be best to resolve them before the wedding.

The expression of affection through sex is a vital ingredient of a marrige and if you are not feeling sexual toward your fiance then it is possible your marriage could turn out to be a disappointment to both of you.

Feelings are very complicated and the fact that you are not "turned on" at this time does not indicate that there is something "wrong" with you. Rather it might indicate that you are confused about how you are feeling toward your boyfriend and the way he approaches you sexually, about the way you feel about yourself.

As one's sexuality is an important factor of one's life it is important to sort out any difficulties in that area. I suggest you seek professional counselling.

Dear Dr. Cotter: You replied to a letter about a girl being taken out of school, and added that you knew someone who dropped out of school at 16 and took up a chance to become a junior executive at 19½. You added "A girl, too!"

What do you mean by that? You make it sound that girls aren't capable of reaching such goals, so young. At 19½ she is not a girl, she is a young woman. In the future would you kindly watch your wording? It sounds very chauvinistic.

Answer: Yes, it does sound chauvinistic, but I did not intend male chauvinism. I intended something hard to convey in a brief answer — namely, the irony that in a male-dominated society, and one in which educational requirements have been stressed almost excessively, a female person can get ahead very well by dropping out of school, if that person has ability.

I think you would find, if you looked at my answers over a period of time, that I frequently point out to girls or young women that they have rights and opportunities in spite of discrimination.

Dear Dr. Powell: I am a 17-year-old girl with a problem. My boyfriend (also 17) and I have been going out for over eight months. We recently decided to have intercourse. We have only one problem: It hurts me. Do you know of anything we can do? We really love each other and want to make love. I hope you can help us.

Answer: There may be several reasons why you are having pain. The most obvious one is that the hymen or rim of tissue at the entrance to the vagina is tight and will not give or stretch. Another reason may be that there is too little lubrication or fluid so that the vagina is dry.

The best thing for you to do is to go to a doctor or a clinic and be examined. It would be good if your boyfriend can go with you so you can talk over your difficulty with the doctor or counsellor at a clinic.

Contraception is a further important aspect of the decision you have made.

If you have a family doctor you feel you can discuss this with, make an appointment to see him. Otherwise you may prefer to go to a clinic which specializes in birth control and sex counselling.

Bio-dex

for Oct. 18/78 — By Ken J. Michaels — Your computerized biorhythm

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle: You may suffer from a headache today. Be prepared and carry a couple of pain-killing tablets.

11-15 Positive Cycle: A great day for helping others. Wear your best clothes and happiest smile and get to work!

Your Bio-dex levels continue to exert their influence through the night. When your emotional level is low you may have difficulty falling asleep, and perhaps have more than your share of bad dreams. Try a warm relaxing bath at bed-time, and a little light reading to soothe your mind. Remember that a midnight pizza won't help a bit!

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

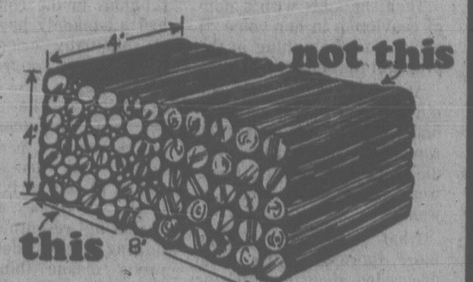
A CORD IS A CORD ...OR IS IT?



Although a cord of wood is supposed to be a fixed measure of 128 cubic feet (a stack 8-feet long by 4-feet wide by 4-feet high), this "precise" specification leaves much to be desired.

Due to the open spaces between a few large logs, the buyer of a cord of wood made up of such timbers will receive somewhat less for his money than the purchaser of a cord composed of carefully selected and closely stacked random-sized logs. It stands to reason, then, that you'll get more for your money if you always specify that some small kindling sticks be mixed with the larger-diameter timbers in any cord of wood you buy.

You should also keep in mind that a cord of softwood usually weighs out to slightly more than a ton while the same measure of hardwood tips the scales in the neighborhood of 1¾ tons. Hardwood, obviously, is the better bargain.

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

Rheumatoid arthritis is such a common, incapacitating disease that letters constantly flood my desk, beseeching information about the newest forms of treatment.

It is understandable, because fears of impending crippling are compounded by the persistent pain. Readers are also confused by the various methods of treatment and ask about the possibility of newer drugs for control of the pain.

As there is no known cure for this distressing condition, all available drugs are carefully surveyed and matched with the individual's special needs.

Aspirin still remains the drug of choice. It is effective, inexpensive and usually well tolerated as a long-term drug.

However, stomach upsets and tinnitus (noise in the ear) may be associated with it. Doctors try to relieve this by suggesting that the tablets be buffered with alkali, or taken with meals, milk or gelatin. Sometimes aspirins are given with enteric coatings.

Steroids (cortisone and its derivatives) are used and carefully supervised for possible side effects. There are also non-steroid, anti-inflammatory drugs which are useful when aspirin cannot be tolerated. Drugs such as motrin, naprosyn, tolectin and nalfon are in this classification.

Gold compounds are still used with great effectiveness in some patients. When side effects become apparent, they are, of course, discontinued. A special substance, penicillamine, once tried and then temporarily discontinues, is now having a wider acceptance.

The newer concepts of immuno-suppressive therapy are also being tried and evaluated as a possible approach to this disorder that is so resistant to the treatment now available.

Since the origin of rheumatoid arthritis is still unknown, this approach may hold hope for the eventual control of the progression of the disease.

AA Boosts Alcoholic Awareness Week

elizabeth forbes

"I am an alcoholic."

It was said quietly, with no emotional overtones, no tears and no self-pity.

Rather it was an honest statement of fact, offered by a young woman, because this is Alcohol Awareness Week, and she wished to help by telling something of her own story.

She has been faced for years with caring for the needs of her children and the duties of a single parent home.

"There was also a part-time career to fit into my every-day routine," she says, "as well as time for friends and a bit of social life.

"Worry about the future was always with me. How to cope, what to do.

"This led me, many times, into a depressed state of mind.

"When that happened a drink after the kids were in bed helped me to relax and think."

Gradually those drinks increased in number but even when she began to realize they were getting out of hand, Delia refused to face the fact that she was becoming an alcoholic.

"I thought I could handle it," she told me. "I believed I was too young, too smart to be an alcoholic and that I didn't need help."

She did everything she could think of to control her drinking on her own "and I couldn't" she says.

It was then that thought of Alcoholics Anonymous first surfaced and was angrily pushed away.

"Although I was fighting just to hang on by my teeth, I was very critical in my thinking about AA," she confesses.

"I saw it as some sort of quasi-religous group that would hit me over the head with a Bible and dwell on my drinking problem as a sin.

"That all I would find there would be mostly older women eager to talk of being alcoholics and how they reacted to that fact.

"And I kept telling myself they would be less than useless as far as I was concerned."

Finally, in sheer desperation, Delia did decide to attend an AA meeting.

"I was still a skeptic and I went with the full determination of taking every aspect of the program apart and uncovering its flaws," she says.

Then she adds with a note of conviction in her voice "I couldn't find anything in the program that doesn't work."

At that first meeting she did see a roomful of alcoholics, of course, but they ranged in age from the middle teens and up, and there were as many men as women.

What surprised her even more, there was little or no discussion about drinking or being drunk.

Rather it was social chit-chat, discussion about current affairs, sharing of jokes and fun and laughter.

"I discovered people there with drinking experiences far more traumatic than mine."

"They had lost family and jobs, been in jail or other institutions. Yet they were happy and still capable of enjoying themselves."

She also found that with everyone, the underlying thought was not a drinking problem, but a living problem.

"It was then I first knew a feeling of hope."

Delia accepted AA and discovered that while it is not religious in the concept she had mistakenly harbored, it is spiritually oriented and that it has a program of 12 definite steps.

The first saw her admitting she was an alcoholic. In others she took personal inventory and when wrong admitted it; kept striving to remain "on track" and from harboring resentments; admitting to having done "some pretty insane things" and then putting those things behind her, and also realizing her need for help.

"I knew it would be hard going and that I would be lucky if I made it over a month without a drink.

"However, I also knew I must work at it, a day at a time and it is that one-day idea that is keeping me going."

There is also the fact that she now has the shared experiences, the strength, the friendship and the support of all those in AA who had the same fears and terrors that bedevilled her own life.

That is the message Delia wants to get across to everyone, men and women, young and old, with a drinking problem and who hesitate to face up to that problem.

Alcoholics Anonymous doesn't go out to rescue. It has a common-sense philosophy which is if anyone, anywhere needs and asks for help it is always there.

In connection with its program it holds as many as 44 meetings a week, some in home, some in regular gathering places.

There are active women's, men's and young peoples' groups as well as the general get-togethers.

AA maintains a small office and coffee lounge at 2020 Douglas Street where anyone may drop in for a quiet chat and assurance of help.

The motto in that office and lounge is "AA Works."

Delia will tell you "I know it does."

Postscript — Alcoholics Anonymous is not affiliated with the Greater Victoria Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society or the Alcohol and Drug Commission of British Columbia, co-sponsors of Alcohol Awareness Week.

Nevertheless, it does wish to help.

Therefore it has arranged an open meeting for Friday at 8 p.m. in the theatre at the Eric Martin Institute, 2334 Trent Street.

There will be a showing of films and a panel discussion, followed by a question period.

A meat specialist at a large university says most families can save more money buying large amounts of meat specials at supermarkets than buying a side of beef for home freezers. That way you buy only meats your family will use. He buys chuck 20 pounds at a time when it's on sale.

"I'd question an ad that listed a 600-pound side of freezer beef for sale," said the university meat specialist. "That side would have to come from a 2,000-pound steer, and there are few that size going to market. A side that large could have a great deal of waste fat and bones you'd be paying the same price for usable meats."

The biggest problem in making jelly without added pectin is to know when it's finished. Nothing can be done about over-cooked jelly which changes color and tastes of carmelized sugar. To test for doneness: Dip a metal spoon in boiling jelly, hold it a foot or so above the kettle. If syrup forms two drops that flow together and fall as one blob, the jelly is probably done. Or, pour a small amount of boiling jelly on a cold plate and stick it in the freezer a few minutes. If it jells, it should be ready.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old woman engaged to marry a 43-year-old man, but that's not the problem.

To get right to the point, I once had a short but beautiful, intimate relationship with a woman who happens to be my best friend.

My fiance knows about this and swears that if she is at my wedding, HE won't be there! Every time she calls me or even when her name is mentioned, he becomes outraged.

Now, Abby, our intimate relationship is over and finished, and we are now simply good friends, but my fiance refuses to accept that. I am worn out trying to explain to him that I really love him and have no desire to start up with that woman again, but he doesn't believe me.

I really love both of them — but in different ways now — and I don't want to be forced to make a choice between them. What is your advice?

— TORN APART

DEAR TORN: If the situation were reversed, and your fiance had had a male lover, could you agree to their continuing the friendship without feeling threatened? I can't blame your fiance for wanting this woman out of your life. And if you are "torn" and can't give up her friendship, I urge you not to marry until you get into therapy and straighten out your head.

DEAR ABBY: We are three married sisters deeply concerned about our mother who, up until a few months ago, was a normal, healthy mother and a loving grandmother.

Mother got involved with a weird religious cult, and now she's taking part in voodoo rites. She gave them $5,000 to make her a "saint." They locked her in a house for seven days and nights with another "saint" who is her "Godmother."

She went through a ritual during which her head was shaved, and chickens and doves were sacrificed and their blood poured over her body. For a year she must wear a white turban, support her "Godmother Saint," and get permission before going anyplace. Mother now actually believes that she has the power to cure, curse and kill!

Her lovely home has become filthy — cluttered with candles and all sorts of ceremonial paraphernalia. She hangs up the phone when we try to reason with her, and says if we can't accept her new religion we can all drop dead. She vows she will never give up her religion even if it means never seeing her children or grandchildren again.

The police know all about this cult, but they say they can't do anything about it because our mother joined it of her own free will. Her doctor says she definitely needs psychiatric treatment, but we can't get a psychiatrist to commit her.

Meanwhile, our lawyer says that he is powerless to act without a psychiatrist's affidavit.

Please help us.

WAITING

DEAR WAITING: Even though your mother insists that she chose this "religion" of her own free will, she obviously was influenced by some kind of mind-control such as hypnotism or brainwashing.

The fact that your mother paid $5,000 to become a "saint" and now claims powers to cure, curse and kill is clear evidence that she is a very sick woman.

You need a lawyer and a psychiatrist who will work together in an effort to get your mother deprogrammed and restored to normalcy. Don't give up!

Dan Dailey Dies at 62 Of Anemia

HOLLYWOOD — Dan Dailey — a song and dance man in musicals of the 1930s and 40s who became a respected actor and wanted to go on stage in a wheelchair to keep working after a crippling injury — died in his sleep Monday of anemia at the age of 62.

From 1969 to 1971 Dailey starred as the governor in the television series, The Governor and J.J. He was nominated for an Academy Award for Mother Wore Tights in 1947, one of a series of musicals co-starring Dailey and Betty Grable.

His manager, Al Melnick, said Dailey had been "virtually an invalid" since August, 1977, when he fell on stage during a performance of The Odd Couple at a dinner theatre in North Carolina, breaking his hip, and his condition was aggravated for the last several months by severe anemia.

"He had an artificial hip put in, then it became infected and he developed anemia," Melnick said. "We urged him to go to a hospital but he hated hospitals and refused to go."

While the fall forced Dailey to abandon plans to perform in a new Broadway show, Spotlight, Melnick said the actor had hoped to continue his career in The Man Who Came to Dinner, in which the leading character is confined to a wheelchair.

The New York-born actor always considered dancing a "lucrative hobby," even though his first film role with MGM in 1940 was that of a "heavy."

VICIOUS BAILED

NEW YORK — Punk rocker Sid Vicious, charged with murder in the stabbing death of his 20-year-old girl-friend, is free on $50,000 bail.

A grand jury is considering evidence prosecutors hope will lead to the rock star's indictment in the death of Nancy Spungen. He was scheduled to appear in state Supreme Court today for a preliminary hearing.

A spokeswoman for the prosecutors, Mary DeBourbon, said there was no assurance the hearing would be held.

McLaren said bail was raised by Virgin Records, a London-based firm.

Vicious, whose real name is John Simon Ritchie, had been in the prison's drug detoxification ward under treatment for methadone addiction since his arrest Thursday.

Top Billing For Frampton Nothing To Sneeze About

NEW YORK — Peter Frampton will have top billing over the Bee Gees in the movie Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, a state Supreme Court justice has ruled.

Judge Israel Rubin said Monday that Frampton's contract with the producers, the Stigwood Group, granted him "sole star billing" in the production.

The judge issued a temporary injunction barring producer Robert Stigwood from placing the name of the Bee Gees on the same line with Frampton's pending a trial.

The judge denied a similar request dealing with the record album featuring the sound track of the movie because that contract has different provisions.

Rubin added that he is aware of Stigwood's desire to capitalize on the Bee Gees' "sudden surge of popularity originating from the motion picture Saturday Night Fever."

However, he said, Stigwood still has to honor its "contractual obligations" to Frampton.

Tut, Tut! For Shame

WASHINGTON — Isaac Bashevis Singer says he is sure his parents would not have approved of his latest book.

Singer, the winner of this year's Nobel Prize for literature for his tales in Yiddish of the now-faded world of Jewish Warsaw, writesin Shosha of a rabbi's son who has affairs with three women at once and makes love to a friend's wife.

Twins Who Have Never Looked At Each Other

OGDEN, Utah — Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen, who celebrate their first birthday Wednesday, hold hands, pull one another's ears, giggle and chatter for hours, but they have never seen each other, except in the mirror.

The girls are joined at the tops of their heads, facing the same way. Otherwise, they are normal one-year-olds, says their father, David Hansen.

"We want them to grow up, date and marry like other girls," he said.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal was played in a rubber-bridge game, West found an interesting way to misdirect the South declarer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

Dummy's ten was played on West's opening spade lead, and East captured the trick with his jack. East then cashed the spade king, after which he played the ace of spades. On the third spade lead West had a discard to make.

It is my guess that virtually every West defender in this world would have discarded either a club or a diamond But not our West defender. He trumped his partner's winning ace of spades, and then led the three of diamonds. The trick was captured by dummy's queen.

Put yourself in our South declarer's seat. He had been wondering all along which high trump to lay down first, and whether or not he should finesse against the queen on the second round if both opponents followed suit to the first round. But when West "wasted" a trump on his partner's trick, South felt reasonably sure that West did not hold the queen of trumps, for if he did he surely would have guarded it.

So, after winning trick four with dummy's diamond queen, declarer laid down the board's king of hearts, probably intending to finesse on the next round against East's presumed queen. On this lead East discarded a diamond — and West's queen of trumps was now assured of taking the setting trick.

West really couldn't get up on the table and dance, partly because gloating is frowned upon in most circles, but partly because South might have started trumps from the wrong hand in any case. Nevertheless, West — felt — and properly so — that he had at least nudged declarer in the wrong direction, which was the best he could have done.

For those players who might still believe that deception, chicanery and the creation of illusions have no place at the bridge table, this deal is submitted in refutation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You win overall "game." Profit replaces red ink. Accent on protection of valuables, perceiving basic requirements, collecting needed information. Libra, Aries persons figure prominently. You can complete a key project, assignment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take steps leading to greater independence of thought, action. Be confident, direct, original. Get to heart of matters. Express yourself in dynamic manner. You receive accolade based on display, courage, initiative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some persons want to confuse you. Key is to stand tall. You need not fear shadows. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons figure prominently. A committee is concerned in areas that interest you. Decisions will provide for ultimate celebration.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on social event, romance, fulfullment of some hopes and wishes. Gemini, Sagittarius — and the number 3 — figure prominently. Look beyond the immediate — you'll have opportunity to enlarge horizons. Element of timing is on your side.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dig in — don't give up something of value for nothing. There is room for you at top. Know it and act as if aware of it. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Favor, you never expected to be returned, is repaid.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Communicate, get viewpoint across, travel be ready for feedback, keep alert and be sure your concepts are crystal-clear. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. Be analytical. Piece together available information. You can come up with complete story.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What seems hidden, perhaps out-of-reach, will become available. Domestic adjustment is indicated. Budget discussion is on agenda. You find ways of beautifying surroundings. Home can become a more inviting, harmonious place.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on contractual obligation, public relations, coming to terms with those whose views may be opposite your own. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently. Go slow enough to "Smell flowers." You'll comprehend!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dc. 21): Stick to course, maintain "hard line" where basic objectives are concerned. Priorities come into focus. Dependents make known their needs. One close to you professes love — and could also issue an ultimatum.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You might find love — creative juices are activated. You gain wider recognition. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Young persons become allies. You're given a "vote of confidence." Answer to important queston is in affirmative, but job is not yet completed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You gain enlightenment concerning property, basic security. Stress independence, freedom for shackles of tradition. Learn from past, but refuse to be bound by "old sayings" of superstitions. Leo plays important role.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check various sources. Be alert to tips, clues, hints. Hunch may be accurate, but verification should occur as matter of course. Relative confides dilemma concerning move, property value, investment — and digestive problem.

IF OCTOBER 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are creative, aggressive, insistent on following through on projects. You have finger on pulse of public. You are dramatic, charismatic — and you attract fans, followers and detractors who are envious. This has been a year of business, success, responsibility, intensified relationships — all of this being magnified last month. You make new start in November. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life.

Symphony Men Do Their Bit

Among Victoria Symphony musicians setting out to do their bit on behalf of the symphony's present financial problem, are bassoonist Jim Ewen, and clarinetist Pat Daniels.

Assisted by Philip Tillotson at the piano, they will be presenting a duo recital at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Thursday at 8 p.m.

Admission will be free but donations to the Victoria Symphony Society will be accepted.

Works to be performed include Sonata for bassoon by Telemann; Rossini's Introduction, Theme and Variations for clarinet and orchestra; Sonata for clarinet and piano and the lovely Glinka Trio Pathetique for clarinet, bassoon and piano.

AUDITION CALL NOW FOR BOEING-BOEING

Anyone interested in taking part in the Victoria Theatre Guild production of the comedy, Boeing-Boeing, should attend auditions at Langham Court Theatre tonight, not next week as wrongly indicated in a weekend ad.

The auditions will commence at 7:30 p.m. For further information the number to call is 384-2142.

A Village In the Country

An unbelievably peaceful and beautiful subdivision of 76 acres which includes 22 acres of fields and parkland for private enjoyment. This unique and one of a kind subdivision consists of 39 strata lots, no lot being less than ½ acre. Now available are 6 single family, 2 and 4 bedroom homes from $49,000 to $69,000. Also, 20 lots ranging in price from $22,500 to $25,500. The subdivision is served by a paved private road, overhead street lighting with water and sewer services laid on to each lot. The private fields particularly would be of great interest to lovers of horses. The subdivision is surrounded by rich farmland and is located 2½ miles south of Duncan at 4741 Koksilah Rd. Driving time to Victoria is approx. 40 minutes. Simply to visit Fairbridge can be a deeply satisfying experience.

Tourist Tax Cut Seen Bad News For Homeowners

Greater Victoria elected officials say a 40 per cent reduction in property assessments for qualifying hotels, motels and trailer parks may be good news to the hospitality industry but it spells bad news for homeowners who will probably see their taxes go up.

Spokesmen for local councils point out that the revenue lost to municipalities through the reduction, announced last week by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, will have to be made up by other categories of property including the already overburdened residential taxpayer.

The tourist establishments eligible for the tax break — assessment reduced from 25 per cent to 15 per cent of actual value — will be those which close or offer long-term rental during the off-season for a period of 150 days.

Esquimalt Ald. Colin Blair said he's "pretty certain" homeowners' taxes will have to go up as a result, and the government owes them an explanation why they must suffer while motel and hotel owners benefit.

"I don't think they (the accommodation industry) needed the break," he said. "Grace McCarthy has just finished telling us what a banner year it was for B.C. tourism."

Blair noted this is the second time in recent months that residential taxpayers have been hit under an assessment reshuffle. The last time it was the apartment owners who got the break at their expense, he said.

He noted that businesses can write off property tax, mortgage interest, heating fuel and other expenses from their income tax, while the private citizen has no such tax privileges.

Saanich Ald. David Paterson, chairman of council's finance committee, said if some hotels and trailer parks offer long-term rentals in the lean off-season months that does not alter their primary role and purpose.

He said if the government wants to provide an incentive to the industry it should do so through some form of direct grant rather than property tax relief.

Paterson observed, however, that Saanich has relatively few hotels and motels and therefore the effect of the tax redistribution will not be as significant as in Victoria.

Ald. Murray Glazier, Victoria's finance committee chairman, said the government's action does nothing to lessen the cost of operating police and fire departments, sewers, hospitals and other services.

"What the government is providing is that the hotel industry will pay less of these costs and this means other businesses, industry and homeowners will pay more," he said.

"We don't know how much this increase will be until the tax roll is calculated. But we have been losing industry and jobs under the present assessment rate, and whatever increases result from the hotel category reduction will worsen that situation."

BARRETT PLANS TOUR OF NORTH

The tour opens with a public meeting in Dawson Creek Oct. 25 followed by a banquet in Fort St. John the next day.

Barrett will attend a dinner-dance Oct.27 in Prince George and the following day, a group of New Democrats will hold a public caucus meeting to discuss community problems in various locations throughout the province.

GARDENING

Lily Job Takes Time

The yellowing leaves of the Convallaria, commonly called the Lily-of-the-Valley, are an indication of the correct time to work on the bed.

Most gardening jobs yield a high percentage of satisfaction in the "doing" aside from the pleasure in the results, but few gardeners get any fun out of remaking a bed of Convallaria.

One reason is that it is a job needing time and care; it cannot be done in a rush. Another reason is the time of year on which the bed can be worked, usually about the end of October into the beginning of November when most of leaves have browned.

Fortunately it is not a job that needs doing every year, but the time eventually arrives when not one good flower spike is produced, a sure indication that the bed is a mass of roots and the soil impoverished.

Much to the surprise of the uninitiated, the roots are similar to the runners of couch grass, white threads with growth crowns here and there throughout their length. It is from these crowns, or pips as they are called in the trade, that the leaves and flowers emerge.

There seems no end to the quantity of roots once the digging is started, but nothing is gained by leaving half of the job undone. So make up your mind it is a big job and give yourself time to do it well.

Put the lengths of root into a cardboard box, or a wooden flat, and lay it aside for further work after the bed has been renewed.

Lily-of-the-Valley need an enriched soil, good drainage, not deep shade, but shelter from continuous sun at flowering time is desirable. To the northeast of a building where early morning sun can reach the bed, and shadow from mid-morning on, is ideal.

Mix plenty of compost with the top soil, and add a three-inch potful of bonemeal to each square yard. Thoroughly mix the topsoil, compost and bonemeal and roughly level the bed.

If the bed is large, it is best to remove about two inches of the mixture and place the crowns or pips three inches apart, then cover with soil. A small bed can be planted by making holes for each pip.

The next step can be carried out indoors sitting in a comfortable chair. It is the sorting out of lifted roots and selecting the pips for replanting.

Until the pips are sorted for size it is difficult to know how many will be needed for the bed. The pips are separated from the long roots by cutting the runner about one inch from the pip or half way between two pips.

The largest pips will be the ones to give the best flowers. If there are enough of these, the smaller ones can be discarded, or set into another bed under a tree to grow on.

When there are not too many large pips, medium size must be used for the main planting. The largest are then mixed with the medium when planting, or set in one area for a good display.

In a large bed, lay out the pips on the soil about three inches apart, then gently over the soil. In a small bed use the same spacing, making holes two inches deep to take the pips.

Your reward next year may be only a few flowers from the largest pips, but don't despair. In the following year you will be happy with the results and the time you spent remaking the bed.

Nature Expert Honored

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The late Roderick Haig-Brown, one of British Columbia's foremost conservationists, was honored Monday when a commemorative plaque was unveiled on the banks of the Adams River, about 70 kilometres east of here.

His wife, Ann Haig-Brown, and Dr. Peter Larkin, dean of graduate studies at the University of B.C. and an authority on salmon, unveiled the plaque before about 150 persons.

Larkin spoke of Haig-Brown's unyielding concern for conservation in fishing and the importance of respecting nature.

Also paying tribute to Haig-Brown, who died in 1976 at 66, were Sam Bawlf, B.C.'s minister of recreation and conservation, Rafe Mair, Kamloops MLA and minister of consumer and corporate affairs and federal Environment Minister Len Marchand.

Island Naturalist Clubs Oppose Timber Deals

Vancouver Island naturalist clubs are opposed to any form of compensation or timber trading for land withdrawn from public forests for use as parks or the protection of wildlife and fisheries.

A resolution unanimously endorsed at a regional meeting of clubs at Duncan on the weekend rejected the point of view of logging companies that their temporary occupancy of public forest land confers private ownership of the timber on the land.

David Orton, a member of the Federation of B.C. Naturalists, said 95 per cent of forest lands are publicly owned or held in the name of the Crown for the people of the province.

"Logging on forest lands is thus a privilege, not a right," he said.

"Thus it should not be the concern of logging companies if land is withdrawn from a watershed to serve the basic needs of animals, birds and fish."

He cited as an example the Tsitika Valley, the last unlogged watershed on the east coast of Vancouver Island, which conservationists are fighting to save for wildlife and fisheries.

He added, however, if a logging company has paid taxes over the years on timber standing on Crown land, such as old temporary tenures granted prior to 1907, the company is entitled to reimbursement of previously paid taxes on the land withdrawn.

Members were critical of current logging practices, such as large-scale clearcuts.

"There are alternative logging methods," said Orton.

"These methods not only benefit forest lands but other resources such as fisheries and wildlife.

"Good forestry, in opposition to bare-land forestry, is not only economically sound, but provides more employment," he added.

He said the cutting plans endorsed by the B.C. Forest Service for the Tsitika watershed will result in large-scale erosion.

Fled for Life, Refugee Status Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — A 28-year man who fled from strife-torn Lebanon in 1976 because he feared for his life cannot claim refugee status under Canadian immigration rules, the Federal Court of Appeal ruled Monday.

In an unanimous decision the three-man court under Chief Justice W. R. Jackett said Hassan Darwich, now working as a cook in an Ottawa restaurant, should be deported to Beirut as soon as practicable as ordered by the immigration department.

Darwich, who sat in the back row of the court during the one-day hearing, says he is considered to be a Moslem sympathizer in the Lebanese civil war and that his name is on an execution list.

He says he escaped to Syria after four other neighbors, also on the execution list, were killed. He obtained a visitor's visa to Canada at the British embassy there.

Evidence in court Monday was that Darwich married a Canadian on an earlier visit here and was told to return home if he wanted to apply for Canadian immigrant status. He says he returned to Lebanon for that purpose but that the civil war there made such an application impossible.

His claim for refugee status was denied by the immigration department and later by the immigration appeal board, on grounds he was fleeing a civil war, not persecution.

The board said he did not meet the United Nations definition of a refugee — a person with a well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality membership of a particular social group or political opinion and does not wish to return to his country because of that fear.

Terry Jabour, appearing for Darwich, argued that the board erred in law in finding his client not eligible for refugee status without allowing the complete appeal to go on. The board had refused to hear the appeal after making its decision on the refugee status.

Jabour also questioned the finding that a civil war is not persecution as envisaged by the United Nations.

Chief Justice Jackett said it is understandable that a person would not want to return to Lebanon because of the fighting there. But the law must be upheld.

He said he found no error in law of the appeal board's finding that Darwich fled the civil war, not persecution on religious lines.

Win Entrance Scholarships

The University of Victoria has awarded eight local residents with a president's special entrance scholarship for the current academic year.

Highway Contracts Awarded

A series of highways ministry construction contracts will bring improvements to the main Vancouver Island Highway.

Hub City Paving of Nanaimo won a $330,000 contract to pave 4.8 kilometres of highway as part of the Trans Canada Highway improvements in the Nanaimo area.

Six kilometres will be paved in three sections of the Island Highway between Parksville and Courtenay. The $580,000 project consists of passing sections on the highway which will act as traffic safety relief valves in heavy traffic.

And a Surrey firm will build two bridges at a cost of $548,000 across Lukwa Creek and the Tsitika River on the north Island highway north of Campbell River.

Ugly Murder Stuns Uruguay

By CHARLES KRAUSE
Washington Post

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — All the elements of an Agatha Christie thriller are present: kidnapping, smuggling, an estranged wife who tried to kill her husband by poisoning his orange juice. And of course a perfect motive — money.

This Uruguayan capital is abuzz with speculation about the grisly murder of one of Uruguay's richest businessmen last month.

An investigation focusing on the mansions and clubs of Montevideo's leading families, while not resolving the murder, has produced some startling charges against relatives of the victim. They are accused of having smuggled out of the country about $100 million in hard currency over the past eight years.

It is unclear whether the currency smuggling was connected with the Sept. 12 murder of Roberto Saenz Gallinal, whose family owns Uruguay's largest tire manufacturing company and several large cattle ranches. His body was cut up and stuffed inside a suitcase found on the outskirts of Montevideo.

At first, it was thought that Saenz's had been a political murder, perpetrated either by the military that runs Uruguay and has a bad international reputation for its abuse of human rights — or by terrorist groups.

The problem with this theory, according to a diplomat who has followed the Saenz affair, was that Roberto Saenz had never been involved in politics.

After Saenz's body was found, the government promised a full investigation. Montevideo's newspapers, which are heavily censored, published very little after the government announced that its investigation was underway.

The talk around Montevideo's better dinner tables was that Saenz was not killed for political reasons. His murder had the look and feel of a Mafia job, possibly carried out by paid killers sent over from Argentina.

Although the government investigation has so far not charged anyone with Roberto Saenz's murder, the investigation did, this past week, lead to other charges that many observers here think provide an adequate explanation for the crime.

The police charged Roberto's brother, Gilberto Saenz Gallinal, his estranged wife, Alicia Garcia de Saenz — a former model the press delights in referring to as "la modelo," and eight others with having smuggled $100 million in hard currency out of Uruguay over the past eight years.

According to the information officially released, the smuggling scheme was designed to take advantage of higher interest rates and black markets for dollars in neighboring Argentina and Brazil. This probably meant dealing with some shady, gangster types, according to sources who claim to know about these things. Of course, the money was smuggled out in suitcases.

In the course of the investigation, the police said they had also discovered that la modelo had recently tried to kill her husband, from whom she is now separated, by poisoning his orange juice.

Although several persons who know Gilberto and Alicia dismissed this as nothing more than a domestic matter which probably had nothing to do with the alleged smuggling operation, it did provide another dollop of gossip for much of the rest of Montevideo. She has not been charged with attempted murder.

Although the proceedings against the Saenzes and their alleged eight accomplices in the smuggling business have not been completed, the authorities have told the newspapers here that the government will seek prison terms for those involved if they are found guilty.

There is still one thing, beyond an official explanation of who killed Roberto, that should provide an interesting end to the Saenz affair: It is not a crime to export currency from Uruguay and nobody can figure out exactly what law could conceivably have been broken.

The charges against the 10 are "conspiracy to commit a crime," but the crime is not specified. The thinking at the moment is that Gilberto, Alicia and the eight others have, more or less, been accused of committing a "moral crime" against the nation by taking so much money out of the country.

When a visitor asked several well-informed Uruguayans how someone could break a law that was not written down any place, he was told it was a good question but that he simply didn't understand the way things work in Uruguay.

U.S. Judge Acquits Berster On 2 Counts

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — A federal judge today acquitted West German fugitive Kristina Berster of two of the eight counts charging her with illegally entering the United States.

U.S. District Judge Albert Coffrin granted defence motions for acquittal on charges she used a false passport to enter the United States and used a fictitious name to cross the border.

He denied defence motions to dismiss the remaining charges against Miss Berster and co-defendent Ray Kajmir, 33, of New York City.

Miss Berster, 28, remains accused of several counts of lying to immigration officers and trying to elude examination while crossing the border.

Coffrin's rulings paved the way for Miss Berster — who authorities say has ties to terrorists in West Germany where she is wanted for criminal conspiracy — to take the stand in her own defence.

The judge ruled that since a passport, in itself, is not sufficient for a foreigner to enter the United States, she cannot be convicted of using an allegedly false passport. He said most foreigners are required to have a U.S. visa to enter the country, but she did not have one.

Miss Berster was arrested July 16 on a dirt road in Alburg, after allegedly sneaking across the Canadian border on foot. When asked to identify herself, she allegedly produced a false passport and used a false name.

MAN HELPS HIMSELF TO ARRESTERS' CAR

DALLAS (UPI) — Two police officers had handcuffed their suspect — hands behind his back — and thought they had him under control.

They were quite surprised when he drove off in their squad car.

A police spokesman said the two officers had arrested another man for public intoxication and were on their way to the downtown jail when Ricky Wayne Washburn pulled up behind them in his pickup, honking, flashing his lights and waving at them.

The officers said Washburn then crashed his truck and was arrested. While the officers were discussing calling a wrecker, Washburn managed to overcome his handcuffs and drive away with the suspect as an involuntary passenger.

Washburn, 19, eventually was captured by other officers and charged with improper lane change, escape and theft of a squad car.

A police spokesman said Washburn may have been able to work the Houdini-like stunt by pulling his legs back through his arms.

Hominids Still Stalk Forests?

NAIROBI (AFP) — Hominids — man-like creatures half-way between homo sapiens and his simian ancestors — almost certainly live in Kenya's forests, a French anthropologist says.

She said that since 1966, when she began studying Nilotic and Hamitic tribes such as the Masai and Samburu, she had noted 33 reported meetings between hominids and Kenyan tribesmen.

The encounters with humans went back 60 years and involved four types of hominid, of both sexes, she went on.

With the exception of one type of pygmy-like stature, all were tall, light-skinned with coloring ranging from grey to beige, sometimes covered with fur or with long hair, she said.

Convicted Spies Still Free

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Ruling in what the prosecutor called the interest of foreign policy, a U.S. federal judge has allowed two convicted Soviet spies to remain free until they are sentenced.

However, District Judge Frederick Lacey said his action was "no indication of what this court will do on Oct. 30 (the date he set for sentencing)."

U.S. Attorney Robert Del Tufo had concurred with a defence motion to allow the two men to remain free in the custody of Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

"Discussions have taken place at the highest levels of government," he said. "It is in the best interests of this country to accept the assurances of Ambassador Dobrynin. This unprecedended step is being taken at this place and this time solely in the interest of foreign policy."

Rudolf Chernyayev, 43, and Valdik Enger, 39, were convicted Friday after a 13-day trial of trying to pass U.S. anti-submarine warfare secrets to the Soviet Union.

The two men, both United Nations employees, were arrested May 20 with Soviet diplomat Vladimir Zinyakin, who had diplomatic immunity from prosecution.

16 Additional Teachers Urged for Area

The Greater Victoria Teachers Association (GVTA) has recommended 16 additional teachers be hired in the district next year.

Schools in the Greater Victoria area need more primary teachers, teacher-librarians and instructors for schools with special needs, according to a GVTA budget brief presented to the school board Monday night.

The association wants the pupil-teacher ratio lowered to 18.45 from 18.69, a move that will cost about $150,000 in salaries, Calkins said.

The budget brief, the second submitted annually to the board, got a good reception compared to last year's GVTA presentation which drew harsh criticism from trustees.

According to the GVTA brief, no primary class should have more than 25 pupils.

Trustee Peter Dorazio told Calkins the statistics were misleading because the board has spared no expense to get the finest teachers and has one of the best staffs in B.C.

The GVTA is recommending the district hire an additional six primary teachers, four teacher-librarians and six teachers to staff schools with special needs.

Special-need areas were defined as communities with cultural or social problems such as a high percentage of single-parent families, or where English is a second language.

Floating Papers Traced

RCMP say someone may have boarded the barge in search of valuables and threw the papers overboard.

Packing company cannery superintendent Robert Syre said that although not much of value appeared to be lost, 22 years of records and old photographs were aboard the barge.

Speed Curbed

The move followed submission of a petition signed by 35 residents requesting a reduction in the speed limit on the grounds the road is hazardous for pedestrians.

The road is without curbs, sidewalks or shoulders and cars drive along it a high speeds.

B.C. Leading in Food Production

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia farmers are outpacing those in the rest of Canada in the quest for self-sufficiency in food production, provincial Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Monday.

He also said that recent good weather has saved many farmers from a disastrous harvest.

"In the last three years there has been a two-per-cent increase in the number of farms in the province compared with a three-per-cent decrease in the national picture," said Hewitt.

In the same period, he said, net farm income has increased by 21 per cent compared with a 22-per-cent decrease for Canada.

The minister said total farm receipts rose 18 per cent in three years in the province compared with two per cent nationally, while farm expenses rose 14 per cent compared with 17 per cent across Canada.

Two areas of increased production, he said, are poultry, up 12 per cent in three years, and egg production, up seven per cent.

B.C. also led in beef production, up four per cent in the last three years, a period when prices were disastrous for ranchers across Canada and cattle numbers nationally dropped six per cent.

Hewitt predicted the price of some fresh produce will rise in the next few weeks with the end of such non-storage items as lettuce.

George Rush of the Cloverdale Lettuce and Vegetable Co-operative said Vancouver-area farmers lost about 20 per cent of the late lettuce crop, valued at about $81,000, because of the wet August and September. Present cauliflower stocks, however, should last about six weeks.

Good weather has allowed Interior grape growers to delay picking with the harvest approaching the halfway point. Sugar levels are about 23 per cent and acid levels about normal.

Potato and onion crops are normal while the carrot harvest is ahead of schedule because wet weather has increased the size as well as the danger of rot, said Rick Gilmore of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Co-operative.

The apple crop should be about eight million boxes, nearly one million more than 1977, said Ian Greenwood, general manager of B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd. He said apples are smaller than usual but color and sugar levels are good.

RIGHTS FIGHT

The business manager of the 20,000-member Hospital Employees Union asked Monday that the union take $100,000 from its defence fund to fight right-to-work campaigns.

In his report to 300 delegates at the union's biennial convention in Richmond, Jack Gerow said he fears the Social Credit government is stockpiling anti-union legislation such as right-to-work laws for use at a politically expedient time.

Proponents of right-to-work laws call for the elimination of compulsory union membership.

"There has never been a more saccharine and specious siren song," said Gerow, warning that if such laws were put into effect jobs would go by slave-like auction with employee pitted against employee.

Farm Loan Rate Hikes Rapped

VERNON (CP) — The announced increase in interest rates for loans to Canadian farmers will make it harder for British Columbia farmers to compete with their United States counterparts, the president of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture said Monday.

Pat Hibbert was commenting on an announcement by federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan that the Farm Credit Corp.'s interest rates have been increased to 10 per cent from 9½ per cent.

"It is just another reason why it is hard to compete with the Americans," Hibbert said. "Their interest rate now is three per cent less for farm borrowing than ours."

Hospital Board Urged

Health Minister Bob McClelland said Monday that the public administrator at Vancouver General Hospital (VGH) is trying to work himself out of a job.

The minister said he has received an interim report from administrator Peter Bazowski recommending the government develop "a return to some form of board of management approach to VGH as quickly as possible."

McClelland announced Aug. 11 the dismissal of the board of trustees of the troubled hospital and the appointment of Bazowski, former head of the RCMP in British Columbia, as administrator.

Mediator Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial ministry of labor Monday appointed mediator Peter Dowding to try to reach a contract settlement between Pacific Press Ltd. and the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions.

Dowding has told both sides he will hold his first meeting Friday.

The council's five unions, representing 1,400 employees at the the Sun and the Province newspapers, applied for the assistance of a government mediator after negotiations stalled Oct. 6. The current contracts expire Oct. 31.

BOARD CUT DISALLOWED

NANAIMO (CP) — Nanaimo School Board chairman Bill Holdom said Monday Education Minister Pat McGeer has disallowed application by Nanaimo school district to reduce its board membership to seven from nine.

Holdom said McGeer objected because of the nearness of board elections in November but invited further discussions at a later date.

Lady Grace Salvage Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court of Canada gave permission Monday to a Vancouver salvaging firm to attempt to raise the foundered ship Lady Grace from the city's harbor.

Can-Dive Services Ltd. has exclusive salvage rights to the 1,364-kilogram vessel for 90 days.

The 94-metre-long former ferry was to have been refurbished as a stationary restaurant-office complex but was sunk in May when a water line was turned on and it filled with water.

Enter the Oktoberfest Contest for a trip to GERMANY and much more!

Ask Mr. Foster is joining in the festive spirit by offering a trip for 2 persons to Frankfurt, Germany. An estimated value of $1,000, this prize includes a fun flight via Air Canada 747 Western Arrow Charter Class and 2 nights accommodation in Frankfurt.

One of our lucky Lower Mainland customers will win a dinner for 6 persons at the famous Black Forest Steak and Schnitzel House Ltd., White Rock. This prize, estimated at $180, must be used before December 30, 1978.

3rd prize: Enjoy a German food hamper!
Each of our B.C. stores will be giving away a hamper filled with foods from Germany. It's a fine Oktoberfest feast! Estimated value: $30.

And that's not all! There's food, fun, and more!
As well as chances to win and save, the Bay's Oktoberfest celebrations bring you specials in our restaurants. Try the tasty Oktoberfest Platter, Wiener Schnitzel and Apple Strudel in all Bay Buffets.

Join the fun at the Oom Pah Pah Show with "The Alpine Boys" 6-piece band and a troupe of German dancers. See them in the Haida Room at the Bay Richmond, October 18, or in the Seymour Buffet at the Bay Downtown Vancouver, October 19 through 21.

Shop to the lilting sounds of the clarinet and accordian at the Bay Downtown Vancouver. Throughout the Oktoberfest Sale, October 16 to 21 (noon to 2 p.m.), strolling musicians will be entertaining our customers. All this and much more is yours at the Oktoberfest. See you there!

CUPW Ordered Back In Bill

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Striking postal workers were ordered to stay on the job until Dec. 31, 1979, under a stern back-to-work bill introduced in the Commons today.

The bill orders an end to the national strike called Monday night by leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW). It provides stiff fines for violation of the law.

There was no immediate indication the legislation will be obeyed by Victoria's inside postal employees.

Peter de Belle, secretary of the Victoria Local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said members will have to consider a number of factors before deciding whether or not to obey a government back-to-work order.

He said the union will have to study the contents of the strike-ending legislation, then the CUPW executive will have to make some recommendations following which, meetings will be held at the local level to see what the members wish to do.

Jean-Claude Parrot, the union's national president, has said he would ask workers to disregard such legislation.

Under the bill, an individual member who defied the order to return to work and stay on the job would be fined $100 a day for each day off the job. That is substantially harsher than the straight fine of $100 generally imposed for infraction of the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

Union officials would be liable to a fine of $2,500 plus $250 for each day they disobeyed the law, up from the general provision of a $300 fine. The union itself would be liable to a fine of $10,000 plus $1,000 a day if it counselled disobedience of the law.

The bill was introduced by Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet after his failure Monday night to achieve a negotiated settlement.

It appoints a mediator-arbitrator to make binding contract recommendations if a negotiated agreement cannot be reached.

The bill provides for extension of the collective agreement between CUPW and the government that expired more than a year ago. All attempts to reach settlement since the June 30, 1977, expiration have failed.

Leaders of the 23,000-member union called the inside postal workers off their jobs across the country Monday night, hours after the failure of a final negotiating attempt.

About 2,800 inside postal workers in 34 locals throughout British Columbia were out today.

The 1,850-member Vancouver local walked out at 9:30 p.m. PDT Monday in a well-orchestrated evacuation of the building which took about 10 minutes.

Lloyd Ingram, president of the Vancouver local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), said members were called ou before midnight to prevent midnight shift worters from showing up to work needlessly.

"We've been ready for a month," Ingram said. "After 18 months of fruitless bargaining, we'd be stupid not to be."

Mail delivery in Toronto was halted as about 5,000 inside postal workers joined the strike.

$50M Boost For B.C. Tourism

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia and federal governments today signed a $50 million, five-year agreement to boost tourism in B.C. and to halt Canada's increasing deficit in the international travel market.

Called the Canada-British Columbia Travel Industry Development Subsidiary Agreement, it will pump funds into five major programs, including $9 million tabbed for development of year-round recreational facilities at Whistler Mountain, a ski resort area about 80 kilometres northeast of here.

The agreement was announced jointly at a news conference by Marcel Lessard, federal minister of the Department of Economic Regional Economic Expansion, provincial Economic Development Minister Don Phillips and Grace MacCarthy, provincial minister of tourism.

The agreement, which excludes Vancouver and Victoria areas, calls for low interest or forgivable loans for new and expanded facilities such as resorts, motels and other facilities; creation of "travel generators" such as park development, historic site restoration and cultural centres to attract tourists; training programs for management and staff at tourist spots; and year-round mulirecreational facilities at areas designated world-class ski resorts.

AUXI GETS LIFE

A man who entered a surprise guilty plea to a second degree murder charge today was sentenced in B.C. Supreme Court to life in prison.

John George Auxi, 40, standing before Mr. Justice H.E. Hutcheon, said: "I wish to plead guilty to the lesser inclusive offence of second degree murder."

Auxi was being tried on two counts of first degree murder in the Dec. 11, 1977, shooting slayings of Gizelle Schild, 41, and Sandor Kormos, 43, in Kormos' rented room at 1242 Fort.

The evidence included a statement obtained by an undercover operative who was booked into police cells where Auxi was being held after his arrest March 4.

'I'm Not Going to Be Crushed By a Few By-elections,' says PM

Times News Services

Canadian voters issued a stinging rebuke to Prime Minister Trudeau's 10-year-old Liberal government Monday, electing 10 Conservatives in a record 15 federal by-elections contested in seven provinces.

However, a smiling Trudeau told the Commons Monday night: "I'm not going to be crushed by losing a few byelections."

He now has at least six months before a spring general election to change voter minds about his government, he said.

"I can take all the time I want to show the people that I can run the country," Trudeau said.

Meanwhile, basking in the afterglow of the victories, Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark told the Commons today he detected "echoes of agony" from the Liberal benches.

As well as the 10 Conservative victories, the New Democratic Party won two seats and Social Credit took one.

Only Employment Minister Bud Cullen verbally acknowledged the byelections when he replied to questions by NDP Leader Ed Broadbent.

The Liberals now hold 135 seats in the House. The Conservatives have 97, the New Democratic Party 17, the Social Credit 9 and there are six Independents.

The Liberals' only wins came in their traditional power base in Quebec, where they retained the Westmount seat and took the Ste. Hyacinthe seat from the Conservatives.

Tories were re-elected in Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, Fundy-Royal, Halifax-East Hants and Hamilton-Wentworth and took the former Liberal districts of Rosedale, Parkdale, York-Scarborough, Ottawa Centre and Eglinton and St. Boniface in Manitoba.

The second NDP victory was a squeaker on Toronto-Broadview, a seat it has held for years.

Perhaps as important as the outcome, was the popular vote. The Conservatives averaged almost 49 per cent in the 15 ridings, up nine percentage points from the last general election in 1974, the Liberals dropped to 30.5 per cent from 41.3 and the NDP rose to 16.4 per cent from 13.5 in 1974.

Broadbent said the win by Fonse Faour, a 27-year-old lawyer, in Newfoundland was a breakthrough for the party.

In Rosedale, David Crombie, the five-foot-five former "tiny perfect mayor" of Toronto, knocked off John Evans, who turned to politics after leaving the presidency of University of Toronto and was a hand-picked Liberal candidate.

The riding had been the preserve of Donald Macdonald who gave up to return to private law practice.

In Parkdale, where Trudeau appeared twice to support Liberal Art Eggleton, a high-profile Toronto alderman for years, Tory Yuri Shymko won a seat that had been Liberal since 1962.

The Conservatives pulled a major upset in York-Scarborough, a riding considered the bellwether for voters. It has always supported the

KORCHNOI ALL BUT BEATEN

The 32nd game of the world chess championship was adjournd with challenger Viktor Korchnoi, a Soviet defector, in a position that experts said is hopeless.

The challenger, playing black, sealed his 41st-move for opening Wednesday after he plunged himself into serious time trouble and had to make six moves in two minutes.

Korchnoi was a pawn down and it appeared the champion had a knight sacrifice on his next turn that would make the game not worth continuing.

Korchnoi's grandmaster seconds believed that the 47-year-old challenger had lost his three-month battle to wrest the crown from his 27-year-old opponent.

Karpov's chief strategist, former world champion Mikhail Tal, said: "You don't have to be a grandmaster to understand the position."

Dow Taking A Clobbering

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The stock market, beset by interest-rate worries and concern over the U.S. dollar's problems, took a pounding today for thesecond straight session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 21.92 points Monday for its largest decline in nearly four years, dropped another 12.30 to 862.87 by 2 p.m.

Monday's decline in the Dow was its steepest since it fell 22.69 Nov. 18, 1974 in the final throes of the 1973-74 bear market.

Also contributing to the gloomy atmosphere was another decline by the dollar in foreign exchange.

City Biker Loses In Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP) — Bicycle riders who are seen breaking minor traffic laws and then refuse to give their names to police are guilty of the more serious charge of obstructing police, says a 5-to-2 majority decision today of the Supreme Court of Canada.

The issue of whether the biker can claim the right to remain silent under such circumstances arose in the appeal of Richard Harvey Moore, a 49-year-old Victoria resident who cycled through a red light in April, 1976.

When Moore refused to give his name to a police officer, he was charged with obstructing the law. A jury acquitted him of the charge when instructed by the trial judge that sections of the B.C. motor vehicle laws imposed no duty on him to identify himself to police.

However, the British Columbia Court of Appeal overturned that decision and ordered a new trial on the obstruction charge.

Both the majority and minority decisions of the Supreme Court said that Moore had the right to remain silent. They also agreed that a section of the Criminal Code allowed the police officer to arrest Moore for going through the red light to learn his identity.

But they parted company on whether Moore was guilty of obstructing the police officer and thus subject to a two-year jail sentence.

Said Mr. Justice Wishart Spence on behalf of the majority:

"I have not forgotten the provisions of the Bill of Rights nor the topic of individual freedom generally. But I am of the opinion that there is not even minimal interference with any freedom of a citizen, who is seen committing an infraction by a police officer, in the police constable simply requesting his name and address without any attempt to obtain from that person any admission of fault or any comment whatsoever.

"On the other hand the refusal of a citizen to identify himself under such circumstances causes a major inconvenience and obstruction to the police in carrying out their proper duties."

Spence added that if anyone wanted to balance the two interests involved he had no doubt that his decision would be supported "by the overwhelming public interest."

Agreeing with him were Mr. Justices Ronald Martland, Roland Ritchie, Louis-Philippe Pigeon and Jean Beetz.

Mr. Justice Brian Dickson, speaking for himself and Mr. Justice Willard Estey, said one issue had to do with the police power of interrogation and the right of citizens to remain silent.

Save the Marmot!

Wildlife Branch Imposes Shooting Ban, Backs Drive By Naturalists

Friendly Little Whistler Nearly Extinct on Island

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

POSTERS will be distributed throughout Vancouver Island next month alerting the public that the Vancouver Island marmot — a friendly little whistling sub-alpine animal — is close to extinction.

A crash program to save the animal has been launched by Vancouver Island naturalist clubs after David Routledge of Nanaimo reported counting only 20 marmots in four known colonies on the island.

Three years ago the count was 50.

The sites of marmot colonies are not disclosed to protect them from indiscriminate hunters.

A B.C. Wildlife Branch official said it has imposed a ban on shooting marmots and plans to co-operate with naturalists to save them from extinction.

"We have never made a study of the animals because of the lack of funds," the official said.

The plight of the dwindling marmots was revealed by Routledge at a regional meeting of the Federation of B.C. Naturalists.

"I may have missed some on my count and there may be just a few more but I visited the site of one colony and found no evidence at all that they still exist there."

The island marmot once existed from Jordan River north to Forbidden Plateau, but hunting and logging practices have brought the animal to near extinction.

"It is now as rare as the whooping crane," says Betty McKinnon of the Cowichan Valley Natural History Society.

She said a ski development at Mount Washington near Campbell River threatened one colony.

"What is deplorable is that nothing is done in this province to save endangered species," McKinnon said.

She noted that when a species is endangered in the United States, remedial steps are taken immediately.

"They think nothing of setting aside 300 acres or more of forest land to save a bird species," she said.

ANOTHER common name for members of the marmot family is woodchuck. The groundhog is also a member of the marmot family.

No longer will parents be able to tell their children that it will be an early spring if the bushy tail marmot — or the groundhog as the more popular version has it — sees his shadow when he emerges from his burrow in March.

Good Ship Serenity Fit To Be Tied

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Victoria Mayor Mike Young took his council on a hush-hush trip to nowhere Monday.

Aboard the near-deserted vessel the mayor's crew was at work though, charting a secret course towards calmer seas.

Council sailed ahead throughout the morning before taking a two-hour shore leave to catch some lunch at the nearby Captain's Palace restaurant — the bill being picked up by Victoria taxpayers.

The meeting (the press was barred) was designed to encourage aldermen to hash out all the differences of opinion that usually come to light during debate at the committee stage.

Young denied aldermen were being told not to rock the boat in public. The nautical lesson he apparently wanted to teach was that you don't get anywhere by rowing in opposite directions.

There could be some debate over whether it was salesmanship or seamanship that was being worked at, but aldermen seemed pleased with their shipboard affair.

Ald. John Hayes said it was a worthwhile exercise, a chance for aldermen to speak off the record and off the cuff — to really let their hair down.

But to reporters, who already have extremely limited access to information at city hall, there was concern that the meeting was really just a technique for aldermen to reach agreements on controversial issues before they came up for public scrutiny.

Young assured the press that nothing so anti-democratic was taking place.

Briefly interviewed as he returned to the ship from his free lunch, Young said the informal get-together was designed to allow council members to "air their views on a wide range of matters."

What matters?

Help Plea In Hunt For Knife

The 18-year-old Victoria girl's nude body was found in a wooded lot behind the Cedar Hill Community Centre Saturday evening.

Sunday afternoon 21-year-old Sidney Blair Rhodes, 1629 Burton, was arrested and charged with first degree murder.

Police have been unable to locate the murder weapon. An intensive search by armed forces personnel and police detectives has failed to turn up the knife.

Police feel an innocent passerby may have picked up the weapon sometime over the weekend. Police have appealed to the public to assist in the search.

Anyone having any information that may be connected with the crime is urged to call detectives at the Saanich police station.

MINNIE MOUNTAIN DILEMMA

Who Will Go to Court?

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A court ruling is the only satisfactory way to resolve the conflict of interest controversy involving the Minnie Mountain development at Ten Mile Point, Saanich council was told Monday night.

Although generally agreed on this point, council appeared uncertain as to which of two routes — council or community initiative — should be followed in obtaining a legal judgment.

Mayor Mel Couveller strongly recommended the latter.

He said council should abandon the attempt to obtain any further legal opinions on the issue and proceed with the last stage of the approval process for the development.

At its regular meeting next week council should give fourth and final reading to the bylaw authorizing a land-use contract with Broadmead Farms Ltd., developers of the proposed Minnie Mountain residential project.

That would be a tangible, positive action which could then be challenged in the courts by any individual or group of citizens wishing to do so, the mayor said.

"It can't be handled any other way," he added.

"The opponents of the proposal will have something to shoot at and the courts will have some basis on which they can consider this."

Couveller said any further vacillation would be a "gross injustice" to Ald. David Paterson, the target of the conflict of interest allegations.

But Ald. John Mika, who first raised the charges at last month's public hearing, suggested another form of legal action in which council could take the initiative rather than wait to see what challenge transpires.

He suggested the possibility of obtaining a ruling on a "stated case basis." He explained that this is a simplified procedure in which the facts are agreed by the parties concerned, no evidence is called "and the judge simply applies the law to those stated facts."

After some further disc-ussion council instructed staff to ascertain the technicalities involved in Mika's suggestion, and report on the matter at next Monday's council meeting.

At that time the Minnie Mountain land-use contract bylaw will probably be presented for final adoption.

Following the Sept. 27 public hearing, council initially approved the Broadmead Farms proposal on a 5-4 vote, with Paterson voting in favor.

The central point raised by Mika is whether his council colleague should have been disqualified from voting because Paterson works for a company supplying management services to Pearlman and Lindholm (the municipality's solicitors) which in turn has acted for the developers and associated companies.

Council had hoped to obtain answers to this and related questions, including the position of Pearlman and Lindholm, by approaching the Law Society of B.C.

But society president Mary Southin replied Monday that the society does not recommend lawyers, and — concerning the questions about Paterson — cannot give "gratuitous opinions on such political matters."

Meanwhile, the municipal solicitors have repeated an earlier assurance that there was no conflict of interest involving Paterson, and the Cadboro Bay Residents Association has been advised to the contrary.

ALDERMEN BACK MAJOR REPAIR JOB

Bridge Cracked, Corroded

The Johnson Street Bridge is falling down and it will cost about $1.4 million to repair it, city engineer John Sansom told Victoria council's public works committee today.

Sansom said structural members are badly corroded and he showed slides revealing huge cracks in the concrete piers, and steel beams which were rusted in half in some places.

Sansom proposed $800,000 be spent immediately to undertake the most urgent repairs.

Aldermen recommended the work go ahead and will try and work out a cost-sharing formula with the provincial government.

Asked if the 56-year-old bridge is safe, he replied: "Yes. Well, that is it's not going to fall down tomorrow."

A study of the bridge undertaken by Graeme and Murray Consultants showed that it would cost $710,000 to repair the railway bridge and $164,000 to repair the highway section of the bridge.

In addition, $152,000 is needed for work on the substructure and $374,000 for cleaning and painting — a total of $1.4 million.

Sansom said some of the worst damage was underwater on the west pier where divers found gaping holes, one measuring eight feet by three feet which was big enough for divers to get inside.

The Grand Piano Pickle

Victoria's chronic lack of decent concert hall facilities has been a sore point for years, but surely it's going to extremes to underline the point by making one of the world's greatest singers a whipping boy.

When Luciano Pavarotti visited the city recently with his celebrated assisting pianist John Wustman, Victoria tenor Art Wiebe was so shocked at the appalling condition of the Royal Theatre and especially its small grand piano that he cajoled a local firm into loaning without charge its nine-foot Steinway for the occasion. He first got the consent of Vancouver concert agent Julia Switzer.

Negotiations took Art most of the afternoon of the concert day but with the truck ready to load the Steinway, Switzer suddenly nixed the deal.

Her reason: Leave things as they are and let everyone see just how rotten conditions are in this city!

It was probably meant as a light-hearted joke, but it turned out to be a bit of a cruel hoax with bigoted undertones.

The Times' want ads recently carried an employment item saying Tally-Ho was looking for a driver, specifying a non-drinker, experience with horses not necessary and Polish "descendance" an asset.

Applicants were told to call a Mr. Kelly at a certain number.

The part that hurts the most, he said, was having to tell the 100 to 150 unemployed callers who thought they had found a good job prospect, that the ad was a hoax.

Kelly has no idea who placed the ad, but he said he would like to apologize to any Polish person who might have been offended.

"I'm of Ukrainian descent, so I know all those jokes," he said.

The root of the joke was probably the tally-ho-type wagon the motel has placed in its beer parlor as part of the recent renovations.

No serious damage was done, and proprietor Hans Denne says the two are both good customers and have already been back.

The alcohol was kept in a bottle which the bartender mistook for vodka, one of the main ingredients of a Caesar. It is used for lamp fuel.

The LT News — that's the official newspaper for all the people who work on the buses and the tube in London — recently had an item about Victoria's sightseeing double-decker bus service.

One Arthur Redway, who'd been here on holiday, supplied the paper with a picture of an RT, the model name of the double-deckers, outside The Empress and mentioned that the old buses, which once were used in London, are popular with Japanese and American tourists.

TOWN TALK

Ottawa should announce its tax rules in advance and not make them up as they go along, says Lynne Munro, who faces an unexpected tax bill of $400 for accepting a travel ticket worth $1,200.

She was a tour guide for three weeks in Europe.

"It was really hard work. I enjoyed it and everything but I wouldn't have done it if I knew it was taxable. I didn't get paid anything, just my expenses."

She spent all three weeks on a bus.

"I knew when we were in Belgium because it was Tuesday. Anyway, they should tell people in advance if things like this are going to become taxable."

The future looks good for teachers graduating from B.C. universities in the next couple of years, provided they forsake metropolitan life for a while.

But jobless teachers who won't leave Greater Victoria and the Lower Mainland are going to have a tough time finding work.

The education ministry's annual report on teacher demand and supply says most of the new positions will be in northern B.C. and the Interior.

Yet Another 30 Days in Tank for Frank

Frank Peter Ellis, no fixed address, is the undisputed leader in court appearances here in the last 20 years. He pleaded guilty — again — to causing a disturbance in the 700-block Douglas — again — on Saturday afternoon.

"What is there about the bus depot that's so attractive to you?" the judge asked the 60 year-old man.

Ellis' last conviction for the same offence came Aug. 24, 1978, when he was given a one-month jail term.

"Were you trying to get to Vancouver again?" Ostler asked.

"You and I have grown old together," Ostler said, handing out another 30-day sentence.

The Real Game Is in The Upper Deck

By Bob Ward

NEW YORK (CP) — Television can show baseball from half a dozen angles, with slow motion and instant replays, but to catch the true flavor of the game you have to be in the stands. Especially during the World Series in Yankee Stadium.

Tickets to the game are always in short supply, so when a friend offered a seat at the fifth game of the Yankees-Los Angeles Dodgers championship series, I snapped it up for the $12 cost. Scalpers were offering some tickets at $85 each.

As it turned out, up was the right word. The upper deck in deep left-centre field is about as far from home plate as you can get without leaving the stadium entirely.

"But you can almost reach out and touch the subway," one wag offered.

From the upper deck, the players seem impossibly small and when someone gets a hit, he's halfway to first base before the distant crack of the bat drifts up.

"Not unless he's using a cannon," a veteran upper decker replied.

But the upper deck has its compensations. The fans are probably the most zealous since Walter O'Malley moved the Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles and they tore down Ebbet's Field.

Baseball is serious business up here. Score cards are neatly filled out with much nodding of heads and careful study. Strategy is mapped out before each key play. A failure by the Yankee manager to call for the hit-and-run play when such a move is obvious to the upper deck provokes sharp and often obscene comment.

Between innings, there is much weighty discussion of who is hitting and who isn't, along with caustic commentary on pitching, fielding and the obvious shortcomings of the visiting team.

The cheering may come as a surprise to the newcomer. What at first sounds like a startling chorus of "Boooooo" directed at a Yankee batter turns out to be a joyful "Loooooo", a tribute to outfielder Lou Piniella.

There is also the rythmic chant of "Reg-gie, Reggie" whenever designated hitter Reggie Jackson approaches the plate.

The upper deck set are also masters of the snide comment.

After Dodgers shortstop Bill Ruqsell was charged with an error on one hard grounder and then had trouble with a couple of others, there were several vocal suggestions that the Yankees should vote him a half share of their prize money.

The Los Angeles infield had a lot of trouble putting double plays together, prompting one New York sage to suggest that they should start the next game with a pitcher and eight designated fielders.

The darts are not all reserved for the visitors, however. After Piniella hauled down a long fly to right field and then heaved a lacklustre throw back to the infield, a shout went up "Get a little Ben-Gay for the old hook, Lou."

A suggestion that Yankee pitcher Jim Beattie had a good game in the lop-sided 12-2 victory drew a sardonic rejoinder: "Sure, he fashioned a nifty nine-hitter."

Yankee fans, though, were not out for a demonstration of baseball skill. They just wanted to see their beloved team win—by as large a margin as possible. Even in the late innings, with the visitors trailing hopelessly, every Yankee hit drew thunderous applause.

There were, however, a few disgruntled fans, shivering in the cold wind, who suggested as the evening wore on that the last few Yankees batters might hurry up and strike out so everyone could go home.

Tonight, the series resumes in Los Angeles.

Don Sutton, the veteran right-hander who drew the starting assignment for the Dodgers says there's no black gloom over the National League champions.

"We haven't made the funeral arrangements yet," said Sutton after his club returned from New York where the Yankees swept three games and now lead the World Series three games to two.

"It may end with this game or it might not end with this game, but all of us are in a position where a lot of other people would like to be," Sutton said.

Asked how he would describe the Dodger infielders who have been criticized during this Series, Sutton answered, "Very carefully. These guys got me 21 wins in 1976 and into the World Series three of the past five years. I think you will forget what happened in New York after we play here."

Sutton, 33, was 15-11 during the regular National League season.

Jim Catfish Hunter, 12-6, is scheduled to pitch for the Yankees. The game will be televised on channels 2, 5 and 6 starting at 5 p.m.

Racing Outlook Appears Bright

Sandown opens its fourth season of thoroughbred racing under the auspices of the Capital City Turf Club on Wednesday, the first mid-week start in that brief span.

Director of racing Aubrey Davies, who has held that position in the previous three years, and was racing secretary at Exhibition Park this season, is optimistic that the 17-day meeting will be a success.

"For one thing we have more applications for stall space than before," he said, and I would estimate that we will have about 325 horses to draw from." Last year there were about 275 horses stabled at Sandown.

Horses are here — or will be coming — from Lethbridge, Yakima, Spokane and Seattle in the next few days while some are expected from Regina.

Davies said he planned eight races for opening day with the feature a $5,000 claimer over one mile which has drawn a field of six.

It is planned to have nine races on Friday and Saturday with Saturday's feature being the Colonist Handicap over one mile and 70 yards.

There will be a minimum of eight races each day with the possibility of nine if entries are available. "We will provide all the races we can," he said.

Davies said the track is in good shape after being resurfaced following the summer meeting of the standardbreds and may be faster than in other seasons.

The jockey colony is as strong, if not stronger than it has ever been, which such accomplished hardboots as Bobby Stein, who had 68 winners at Exhibition Park this year; Floyd Tompkins, who had 49 wins on the prairies; Mark Walker, Randy Dailey, Trevor Wilkinson, Jodey Loseth, younger brother of Chris; Robert Bray, Fred Creighton, Gary Demorest, Memo Mena and Don Frazier, among those scheduled to ride opening day.

Jockey Andy Smith, who was originally scheduled to come here, hurt his back recently and missed the end of the Ex-Park season. He may come later.

Scotty Hughes will be the Association steward while commission stewards will be Don Dunn and Joe Horton.

Doug Reid will call the races for his second year, Charlie Ulrich will be film analyst, Tom Acquiline, clerk of the scales; Spec Simpson, identifier and paddock judge; and Brent Peters, assistant to the director of racing.

Parade to the post will be 1 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and 12:30 p.m. on Saturdays and holidays.

There will be exactor wagering as well as win, place and show betting, on every race, which is a change from previous seasons. This is a pattern that was established and proved successful at the summer harness meeting.

There will be a special bus service by Pacific Coach Lines each racing day, leaving the Victoria terminal at 11:30 a.m. and returning at approximately 5 p.m.

SORRY OLD PAL, might be words Denver Bronco quarterback Craig Morton (7) is using to console former-clubmate Golden Richards after Denver scored 16-7 National Football League victory over Chicago Bears Monday night in Denver. Richards and Morton formerly played together with Dallas Cowboys.

Fake Play Pays Off

DENVER (AP) — Chicago Bears seemingly suffered a failure to communicate on a Denver Broncos fake field-goal play early in the fourth quarter of their National Football League game Monday night.

And the Broncos, inspired by the success of the gamble, went on to defeat the Bears 16-7 in a National Football League game.

"We were looking for the fake all the way," said Chicago coach Neill Armstrong. "We just blew the outside containment."

But Bears safety Gary Fencik said: "It was my understanding we were looking to block. I had no idea it was a fake."

In the confusion, holder Steve Foley ran 14 yards for a first down — setting up a touchdown run by Jon Keyworth. Later, Otis Armstrong caught a Craig Morton pass for another score and the Broncos patented fourth-quarter rally was complete.

"I called it (the fake) before the time out," said Denver coach Red Miller, referring to a Chicago time out called after the Broncos had lined up for the kick. "I thought they recognized it, but then I said, 'Let's go with it anyway.'"

"I heard them call time out. Jim Turner said, 'Don't look at the sidelines.' I figured they knew it and Jim thought they saw it, too," said Foley.

Bears running back Roland Harper had given Chicago the lead with a touchdown at 11:05 of the third quarter. Quarterback Bob Avellini, facing a blitz, dumped a short pass to Harper at the Denver 36-yard line. The fullback bulled his way into the end zone, breaking at least four tackles in completing the 33-yard scoring play.

Veteran Denver quarterback Craig Morton, who replaced injured starter Craig Penrose late in the first half, got the Broncos moving in the closing stages of the third quarter with passes of 21 and 15 yards to wide receiver Rick Upchurch.

SOMETHING NEW FOR THE CZECHS

PRAGUE (AP) — Czechoslovakia got its first taste of sports vandalism when about 200 youngsters marched through city streets last weekend following a hockey game, smashing windows, damaging autos, phone booths and traffic signs, the daily newspaper Svoboda reported today.

Svoboda said the vandals retreated as soon as the police appeared with its vans and sirens. But it also expressed consternation that when the dozens of detained were questioned, the police found practically all were of the 15-18 age group.

In Czechoslovakia, like in other countries, supporters of soccer or hockey clubs often march through streets following a game, singing and celebrating. But no instances of major vandalism were reported in the past.

The hockey contest was between Sparta Prague and Vzkg Ostrava. Sparta lost 3-6.

City Council Censures Cal

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The city council of Bloomington, where Minnesota Twins have their offices and play their home baseball games at Metropolitan Stadium, voted unanimously Monday night to censure Twins president Calvin Griffith.

The action was taken in response to statements Griffith made several weeks ago at a Lions Club meeting in Waseca, Minn. Among other things, Griffith said he moved his American League franchise from Washington, D.C., "when I found out you only had 15,000 blacks here."

He also said ballplayers should take advantage of free love rather than get married and have their baseball performances suffer.

The council resolution asked baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn to investigate Griffith's fitness to own the Twins. It also assured Bloomington's 80,000 residents that neither tax money nor staff time would be expended on behalf of the Twins until the club "gives evidence of a changed policy in regard to race, sex and marital status."

Women's Champ

Race Track 'Stupendous'

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The spanking new racecourse at Shatin has won acclaim from Hong Kong with a newspaper headline summing up everyones reaction: In One Word — Stupendous.

The world's latest racecourse, an engineering marvel built on 16 million tons of reclaimed land, is open and catering to Hong Kong's fervent gamblers,

Some first-day bettors complained about chaotic catering and lukewarm beer in the eight-storey stands, but the Hong Kong Standard newspaper readily agreed "the Shatin experience is here to stay and we have no doubt it will soon become the asian racing mecca it was designed to be."

Racecourse manager Tim Thompson was particularly pleased by the way Hong Kong horses handled the galloping track with its sweeping bends and challenging straight. The jockeys also gave it full marks.

"It was delighted by the enthusiasm of everyody, particularly visiting international experts like Bryan Jenks of the British Jockey Club and David Sieff, chairman of the Race Horse Owners Association there," Thompson said.

The South China Morning Post called it "a sensationally successful opening," and noted that Saturday was a particularly propitious day in the Chinese almanac for "moving into places." Shatin also opened in the Chinese calendar's Year of the Horse.

today's markets

Toronto

Declines led advances 374 to 85 with 209 issues unchanged.

Among other industrials, Bow Valley Industries dropped 2 to $42¾, Pacific Petroleums 1⅛ to $41⅞, Westburne International 1⅛ to $35½, Algoma Steel 1 to $24 and Canadian Industries 1 to $21.

Royal Bank gained ¾ to $37⅝, Canadian Tire A ¼ to $25¾, Dome Petroleum ¼ to $82¾, Interprovincial Pipe Line A ⅛ to $16⅞ and Oshawa Group A ⅛ to $7¼.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, beset by interest-rate worries and concern over the U.S. dollar's problems, took a pounding for the second straight session today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 21.92 points Monday for its largest decline in nearly four years, dropped another 12.30 to 862.87 by 2 p.m.

Losers swamped gainers by a 10-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Monday's decline in the Dow was its steepest since it fell 22.69 Nov. 18, 1974 in the final throes of the 1973-74 bear market.

Analysts said that sudden slide in stock prices had prompted additional selling. They also noted speculation that the Federal Reserve might seek to push interest rates still higher in the near future.

Among biggest losers were the airline stocks, thanks to some negative comments from an analyst quoted in the Wall Street Journal. Pan Am led the active list, down ½ to $7¾; UAL fell 3 to $35, and Eastern was off 1¼ to $10⅞, all in active trading.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were broadly lower in afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange, with the 85-stock composite index down 3.15 at 217.48. Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 489,525 shares traded, up from 410,480 shares traded up to the same time Monday. Simpson's Ltd. lost ⅛ at $6⅜, Rio Algoma ¼ at $37, Alcan ⅜ at $36¾ and Canada Cement Lafarge A ½ at $12½.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices moved moderately higher near the close of light trading today on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 3.8 to 498.4 an hour before the close. Leading industrials gained following favorable corporate reports, while oil issues were mixed. Mining shares firmed despite easing in the bullion price after a record high fixing. Canadian stocks declined.
